Anti-Indira Gandhi Protest

Demonstration Crushed in India

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Hundreds of club-swinging police have crushed a demonstration against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, smashing frightened protesters across the legs and dragging them by the hair.

Some 700 police, some on horseback, others with bayonets fixed on rifles, swarmed into the old city of Delhi Sunday to oust about 500 protesters from the grounds of town hall.

At least 30 persons were arrested in the first known antigovernment demonstration in India since Mrs. Gandhi declared a state of emergency five days ago.

The police waded into the crowd in front of town hall and chased the terrified protesters down side streets, swinging heavy wooden nightsticks at anyone in their way.

The frightened demonstrators took refuge in homes, shops and alleys in the crowded old section of Delhi, but police charged into the hideouts after them.

Ten police surrounded two unarmed teen-aged boys who were not participating in the demonstration, ramming nightsticks into their ribs and hitting them across the shoulders and backs of knees.

Police then grabbed the youths by the hair and dragged them screaming to waiting paddy wagons a block away.

Mrs. Gandhi imposed the state of emergency last Thursday and arrested hundreds of political opponents for allegedly taking part in a "widespread conspiracy" to disrupt India's internal security.

The government has said that almost 900 persons have been arrested since the crackdown began, but opposition parties said about 3,500 persons were seized on the first day alone.

Opponents had called for Mrs. Gandhi's resignation because of her State Court conviction on June 12 for violating election laws during the 1971 campaign. She has appealed the conviction to India's Supreme Court.

The demonstrators shouted such slogans as "Long live Jayaprakash Narayan!" and "Indira Gandhi's rule will not last!"

Narayan, 72, who was arrested Thursday, has led a growing "peaceful revolution" movement patterned after the independence drive of the late Indian leader Mohandas Gandhi.

A government spokesman denied reports in New Delhi of the resignation of Supreme Court Chief Justice A.N. Ray. The Supreme Court is scheduled to take up Mrs. Gandhi's appeal on July 14.

"I deny all rumors regarding Ray's resignation," the spokesman said.

The nation's press was under the firm hand of government censors, carrying mostly announcements of support for Mrs. Gandhi's policies.

But the largest newspaper, the Indian Express, published a cartoon on the front page showing two men with their hands over their mouths. There was no caption.

On Saturday, fire raged through part of the All-India Radio building. The government-owned station said the blaze was believed to be "an act of sabotage."

Predict Inflation Won't Go Away Yet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office predicted today that recent declines in the rate of inflation will soon end, with prices resuming their upward swing.

In a projection of the economy's course over the next 18 months, the CBO said it was "moderately less optimistic" than the White House, which has been hailing the end of the recession and a 50 percent cut in the inflation rate.

It also predicted an unemployment rate of 7.8 to 8.2 percent by the end of the year — down from the present rate but above the White House predictions.

CBO is a new agency, created to advise Congress on how much spending to permit to keep the economy on an even keel. Its report was the first it has issued.

The rate of inflation had fallen to an annual level of 5 percent in May — down from an average of 12 percent in 1974.

But developments on the energy front threaten to refuel inflation, the CBO report said.

It cited the oil excise taxes imposed by President Ford, the widely anticipated price increases this fall by foreign oil nations and the possibility that Congress will accept Ford's proposal that domestic oil prices be freed from controls.

As a consequence, CBO predicted an inflation rate of 6.3 to 8.7 percent for 1976 — far higher than May's rate or the average annual rate of 3.4 percent during the era from 1946 through 1974.

Unemployment will also be worse than the White House predicts, though better than May's 9.2 percent rate, the CBO said.

The report's anticipated unemployment rate would compare to the 7.6 percent predicted by the administration and to the historic average of 4.7 percent from 1946 through 1974.

The report summarized: "While the economy appears to be turning up, the judgment of the CBO is that assuming continuation of present congressional and Federal Reserve policies, unemployment and excess capacity will remain high (compared to their average levels over the last quarter century) at least through 1976.

"An economic revival can be expected in the months ahead but unemployment rates will probably not drop much below 8 percent before the end of 1976.

"At the same time, inflation will remain high — probably rising from current levels — primarily because of further increases in energy prices."

Meanwhile, the nation's top housing official, expressing optimism about a recovery in the depressed housing construction industry, predicts nearly 1.8 million new homes will be built in 1976.

"I really do see a recovery in the housing industry," Carla A. Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development, said Sunday in a televised interview (CBS: Face the Nation).

She predicted mortgage rates would continue to fall — perhaps to 8.5 percent — and said President Ford should sign a revised housing bill which authorizes up to $10 billion in mortgage assistance. "It would be my recommendation that he does sign the bill," she said.

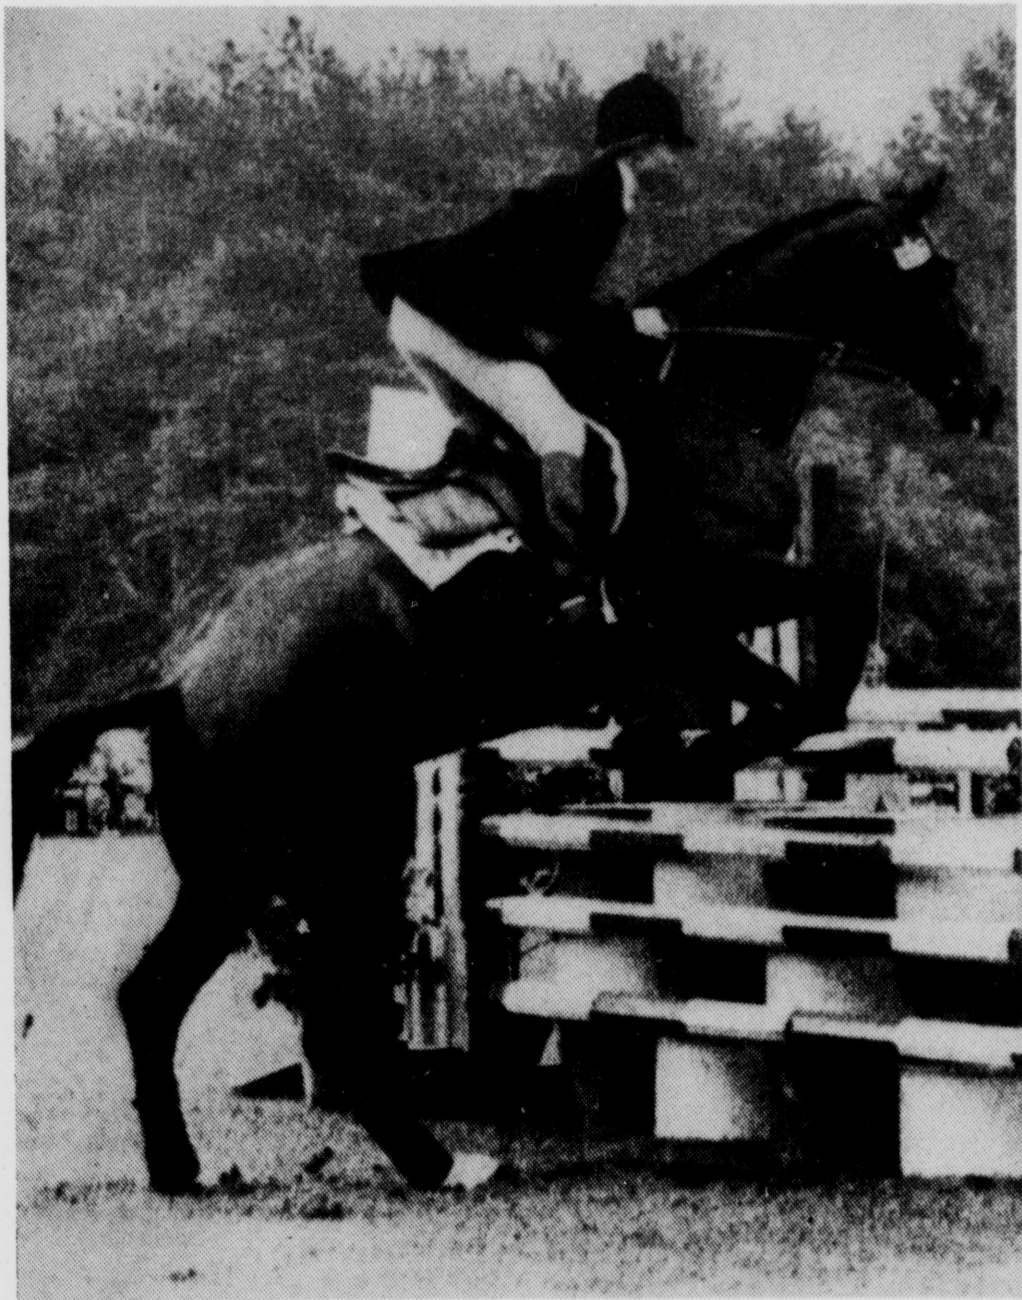

Ford vetoed a somewhat more costly measure with similar programs, and had originally wanted only $7.75 billion in mortgage supports.

"I would like to see a healthy industry with starts at about 2 million — 1.8 million or 2.2 million," Mrs. Hills said. "That would be a goal, but I would think probably it would be closer to 1.8 million in 1976."

She said she was "optimistic that we can approach the 1.6 million or 1.7 million area (this year) ... although I certainly cannot warrant that it is possible in view of a very, very adverse first five months."

Mrs. Hills said housing starts must be gradually improved and "dramatic or imprudent action" should be avoided.

"The problems that we face today are the result of inflationary problems over the last 18 months," she said. "What I'm afraid of is action which will be imprudent and not well conceived. I would not like to take the $10 billion Congress has made available for mortgages and throw it out on the table and say we hope that will work ... Instead, she said, the authorized funds should be used carefully on a month-to-month basis, with the amount spent depending on how rapidly the housing industry regains economic health.

New Energy Research Plan Emphasizes Solar Power

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a sharp retreat from past emphasis on the atom, federal energy officials unveiled a new research plan today abandoning the nuclear breeder reactor as a key power source and raising solar power to unprecedented prominence.

No matter which technology is developed, they said, basic energy costs are likely to double by the year 2000.

The 25-year research blueprint, presented to Congress and President Ford by the Energy Research and Development Administration, said the controversial breeder reactor now probably will not become a major commercial energy producer until the early 21st century — if ever.

It stressed instead the need for an expanded range of research, including more vigorous efforts to produce synthetic natural gas and crude oil from coal and oil shale by 1985 and to increase emphasis on sunlight as a source of electricity by 2000.

Even the most optimistic of six scenarios presented in the plan showed the United States continuing to import oil until 1995, a decade beyond the goal set by Ford. But officials said that did not necessarily discredit Project Independence because actual import levels would depend on future domestic oil and gas discoveries and possible changes in U.S. lifestyles.

The potential of solar electric power production has been virtually ignored in the past. But the plan said it should rank equally with the breeder and nuclear fusion as one of three unproven but potentially "inexhaustible" sources of energy in the 21st century.

At least one of those three long-range processes appears necessary to guarantee the nation enough energy in the future, the report said, but it is impossible to predict now which can be developed for economic commercial application.

It called for five major changes in U.S. energy research policy:

—New emphasis on technical solutions to reliability and environmental problems that now inhibit greater use of presently available energy sources, primarily coal and water-cooled nuclear reactors.

—An immediate focus on conservation efforts, with initial emphasis on the automobile, building insulation and industrial processing.

—Accelerated work leading to commercial production between 1985 and 2000 of synthetic gas and oil from shale and coal.

—Inclusion for the first time of solar electric power — produced by windmills, solar cells and differences in ocean water temperatures — as a high priority possibility for the year 2000 and beyond. —Increased attention to presently underused technologies that can be developed rapidly, such as solar heating and cooling of buildings and the use of geothermal power.

A Convincing 'Psychologist'

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON
Claiming to have a PhD degree from Harvard, "Dr. Kareem Abdul-Rahman" during the past several months in the area has obtained (and lost) employment at Marist College and Ulster Academy and has addressed the Ulster Business and Professional Association (UBPA) as a psychiatrist knowledgeable about crime.

He also apparently has in the past convinced the Newark (N.J.) school district of his credentials. He was hired there as a school psychologist.

But he fled that $13,000 position when a teacher's aide who had gone to school with him recognized him not as Dr. Kareem Abdul-Rahman but as John Willie Covington—a man with a lengthy record of arrests stretching back to 1959.

Now Dr. Abdul-Rahman/Covington is awaiting extradition proceedings in Dutchess County on a warrant from Essex County, N. J. charging him with false representation. He was picked up on the fugitive from justice warrant by Poughkeepsie Town Police while teaching a course in community mental health at Marist College.

A spokesman for the Marist Psychology Department explained that "Dr. Abdul-Rahman" applied for work there in late April, claiming to have a PhD degree from Harvard in clinical psychology. It was orally agreed that he would be hired to teach a summer course and that the contract would be signed when Marist officials received Abdul-Rahman's transcripts. The transcripts never arrived, the spokesman said, and Abdul-Rahman was arrested after teaching one week of the course. A call to Harvard revealed that Abdul-Rahman was not listed as an alumnus, the spokesman said.

Abdul-Rahman also claimed to have a PhD degree when he was hired in early April to teach gym at Ulster Academy, a spokesman for the private school said. He was asked to leave the part-time job after only about a week when school officials became suspicious.

It was in mid-April that Abdul-Rahman spoke before the UBPA, claiming to be a psychiatrist suing in federal court for restitution of his rights after being imprisoned for a crime he did not commit.

His address to the UBPA as Dr. Abdul-Rahman was reported in the Freeman. During his talk, Abdul-Rahman said he was studying genetics as a cause of crime. He said people with extra chromosomes in their genetic makeup "tend to have more energy and get into more trouble than the average person."

He criticized the social system in America, which he said sends the same people back to prison again and again. He termed criminality a "disease," said a trained psychiatrist or psychologist should be able to spot a troubled person quickly, criticized the educational system and called for stronger rehabilitation programs to help ex-convicts get back into society.

Sid Musiker, UBPA president, informed of Abdul-Rahman's arrest, explained that "when you meet him he carries himself like the type of professional he represented."

Dutchess County Couple Killed

HILLSDALE
Four persons were killed, including a Dutchess County couple, and two others were seriously injured Sunday night in a two-car head-on crash near this southern Columbia County community.

Killed in the devastating crash were Harry Thomassen, 48, of the Dutchess County community of Millbrook, his wife, Julia, 53, Gary Laverack, 25, of the Columbia County community of Crayville and his son, Nathan, 4.

Injured in the crash were Laverack's wife, Marjorie, 25, and his sister, Mary Laverack, 12. Both were listed in serious condition today in the intensive care unit at Columbia Memorial Hospital in Hudson.

Claverack State Police said the two cars, driven by Thomassen and Laverack, were going in opposite directions on Route 22 near Hillsdale when the crash occurred at about 7 p.m.

According to troopers, the Laverack car crossed into the opposite lane and slammed into the Thomassen vehicle. The Laverack auto was apparently going at a high rate of speed at the time, troopers said.

Investigation at the scene of the gruesome accident showed that after the Laverack vehicle rounded a curve, Laverack braked, skidding some 100 feet head-on into the Thomassen car, police explained.

School Personnel Want Jobless Pay

By Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON

A large number of school teachers, teacher aides and monitors have been applying for unemployment benefits, according to the New York State Employment Office in Kingston and school officials.

John Klein, acting manager of unemployment insurance said his office cannot refuse to allow school employees to file for unemployment benefits but whether they are entitled to them is another matter.

In order to qualify, a teacher may not have either a verbal or written agreement with a school with regard to returning to their employment in the fall. Klein said that all teachers who have applied for benefits will be interviewed individually to determine whether they qualify for claims.

Teacher aides and monitors can claim unemployment, however, if they have been "denied" employment. Snow days and school holidays fulfill the requirement that they were "denied" employment, under a new law passed last fall. There are 60 monitors and 35 teacher aides in the Kingston Consolidated School system alone.

Once word got around the Kingston School system concerning the new law, "the payroll office was bombarded with requests" for personal payroll information over the past year and application forms for unemployment, according to William M. Turcotte, associate superintendent for teacher personnel.

Klein said that all schools in the county with the exception of Kingston have distributed information and applications forms for unemployment benefits. He said that Kingston refused to distribute the information.

Turcotte explained that Kingston has only two persons in its payroll department and that to comply with the employment office request that it handle the paperwork would mean the payroll department would be deluged with more work than it could handle.

Turcotte also pointed out that there are 20 schools in the Kingston system as opposed to only a few schools in each of the central school systems in the county. Distribution of information and forms would therefore be more cumbersome and time consuming for Kingston.

Also, as of July 1, Kingston's payroll information will be on tape at the Board of Cooperative Educational Services computer center rather than in the payroll office, further complicating matters with regard to unemployment applications.

Turcotte said that if the law required that the school take on the additional work then he would comply but feels at this time priority considerations are utmost and if the school system doesn't have to get involved it doesn't want to. He pointed out however that at the Kennedy School where there are a lot of teacher aides, school officials are helping the aides with the mechanics of filling out forms.

Federal funding for 26 weeks of unemployment benefits covers all teachers who are not normally covered by the New York State Insurance Program excluding teachers who have a commitment to return to work in September.

Klein said he had no statistics at present on how many teachers have made application.

Ronald Noelle, chief negotiator for the New Paltz teachers, said that only teachers who have contracts that expire as opposed to tenured teachers are eligible to apply for unemployment benefits. Others would include private school teachers without contracts and possibly some teacher aides.

Fast Action Taken On School Sewage

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

A spokesman for the Ulster County Health Department said late last week that he is "perfectly satisfied" that the Kingston Consolidated School District has taken all the "necessary steps" to correct faulty or inoperative effluent chlorination units at five of its school sites.

The school district, meanwhile, has given assurances that a sixth problem area will be eliminated before classes resume in September.

It was in early May that the Freeman revealed that chlorination units at six district schools were inoperative and that, as a result, untreated sewage from some of the sites was being discharged into nearby waterways.

District officials conceded at the time that adequate maintenance procedures were not followed, allowing the units to deteriorate. They have since indicated that formal procedures will be adopted to prevent a recurrence of the situation.

The Health Department, likewise, has stated it will now institute periodic checks of the district's chlorination systems. "We will be keeping tabs on them now that we are aware of the situation," said Health Department engineer Dave Eyder Friday, "the units will be inspected regularly."

Dr. Richard C. Schleiter, associate superintendent for business management, told the Freeman that three new hypo-chlorination units have been purchased and installed at the Hurley, Zena and Anna Devine Elementary Schools, and that an operable gas chlorination unit from Zena School has been installed at the Port Ewen Elementary School.

The hypo-chlorination units are considered to be safer and easier to maintain than the older-styled gas chlorination units. Because all of the units are located in close proximity to school buildings and playgrounds, the health department recommended—and the school district agreed—that the units using highly lethal chlorine gas should be replaced by units using diluted liquid sodium chlorate.

The units at both Hurley and Zena, said Schleiter, are operating on a stand-by basis; because the leaching fields at the two schools are currently accepting effluent, the units are not necessary at this time. When the leaching fields become saturated, the excess effluent will be treated by the chlorinators before discharge into nearby streams.

Meanwhile, said Schleiter, the sewage line from the chlorination house at the Lake Katrine Elementary School has been repaired and tied in to the Town of Ulster's public sewer system.

Sewage from a sixth school remains untreated by chlorine but that is not considered a serious problem because the school is not being used extensively at this time of year. Schleiter said it is the Town of Ulster's responsibility to let contracts for the connection of the M. Clifford Miller Junior High School in Lake Katrine to the Town of Ulster sewer district, and he said the project will definitely be completed before classes resume in the fall.

"We believe that we have done everything expected of us to correct the problem," said Schleiter, "the only remaining work to be done (the Miller school) is the town's responsibility."

Ryder, in fact, noted that the school district responded to health department recommendations "very quickly" after initial notifications. "They were kind of quick compared to most people we deal with," said Ryder.

There were no penalties assessed against the school district because of the faulty chlorination systems. According to the law enforcement division of the Department of Environmental Conservation, penalties are usually handed out only if the violator refuses to correct its deficiencies.

Amy Moving Away From Coast

MIAMI (UPI) — Amy, the first tropical storm of the season, bolstered its top winds to 60 miles-per-hour during the night but continued to move away from land in the Atlantic Ocean off the North Carolina coast.

Earlier today, the National Hurricane Center located the storm's center near latitude 35.7 north and longitude 70.8 west, about 260 miles east-northeast of Cape Hatteras. Amy had slowed its northeasterly trek to about 8 m.p.h., a speed and direction forecasters expected to continue today.

Maximum sustained winds were clocked at 60 m.p.h., with gales extending out 125 miles to the north and east of the center. The storm was kicking up rough seas and high tides along coastal areas.

Forecasters said winds and seas along the North Carolina coast will be slow to diminish because of the storm's slow movement.

They warned of "some beach erosion" and "minor flooding" along the Outer Banks north of Cape Hatteras and along the Virginia coast.

Small craft along the North Carolina and Virginia coast were cautioned to remain in safe harbor until winds and seas subside.

Amy grew out of a tropical depression that formed off the North Carolina coast Saturday. Earlier Sunday, the depression's slow movement caused tides to swell to one to three feet above normal and kicked up rough seas and wind gusts along the coast.

Women's Political Caucus Ends

BOSTON (UPI) — Although there has been a sharp increase in the number of women running for and winning political office, one of the successful ones says there's still a long way to go.

Mary Louise Smith, head of the Republican National Committee, told delegates to the National Women's Political Caucus convention Sunday they "must never lose sight of the distance left to travel." She said there were no female senators, one woman governor and 19 congresswomen.

The NWPC Sunday ended up its three-day convention, which urged passage of the Equal Rights Amendment. About 2,000 delegates attended.

Among the speakers were Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and four Democratic presidential candidates: former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, former Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., Rep.

Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Mrs. Smith told delegates women should increase their participation in party politics as a means of improving their influence.

"An upsurge in political party activity by women would, I believe, quickly lead to a dramatic increase in the number of women running for office at all levels.

"Women have come to a time when we must broaden our emphasis," she said.

The NWPC elected Audrey Rowe Colom of Washington, D.C., its new chairperson.

Among the five candidates elected vice chair were Betsy Griffin of Washington, D.C., Vivian Hall of California, Rhea Mojica Hammer of Illinois, Anita Nelam of Kentucky and Lee Novick of Connecticut. Jane Haun Macon of Texas was chosen recorder.

Yoga Instructor's Death Baffling

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Yoga instructor Robert Antoszyk had told friends he was deliberately going to try to project his soul from his body. He was found dead in his room on his back, his thumbs between his index and middle fingers.

Antoszyk, 29, apparently died in a position a yogi uses only in deep meditation.

Just why he died has authorities baffled. A pathologist says Antoszyk, in a self-induced trance, somehow may have managed to slow his heart to the point where his brain received too little blood in essence, death from excessive meditation.

A spokesman for the Integral Yoga Institute says he may indeed have projected his soul from his body — "astral projection" — but that because of his inexperience in the ancient Hindu practice he did not know how to get back.

The answers just seemed to raise more questions.

It was early this month that Antoszyk, whose mother said he was in "perfect health," told friends he wanted to be left alone, to try astral projection — in which the soul supposedly journeys from the body through the "astral plane."

His lifeless body was found June 3.

"His death is a mystery to me," Antoszyk's mother, Lillian, said. "It's a mystery to the undertaker, to the doctor, everybody."

Dr. Paul Gikas, a University of Michigan pathology professor attempting to explain the death, suggested it was possible Antoszyk went into such a deep, trance-like state he slowed down his heart beat to the point where his brain no longer received enough blood.

The pathologist said it would be a medical first if the Yoga instructor, who taught at a local YMCA, did die from excessive meditation.

But Dhamapati M., a spokesman for the Integral Yoga Institute, said Sunday Antoszyk's death could be explained by his inexperience in Yoga — only two years.

"He must have been very inexperienced in astral projection," Dhamapati M. said of Antoszyk, a vegetarian, who did not smoke, drink or use drugs, according to his mother.

"If you can go, you can come back," Dhamapati M. said. "He obviously did not know how to come back."

Astral projection has been spoken of for centuries by Hindus. It is regarded as having "no practical purpose," or simply as a "magic trick" with no spiritual benefit.

The participant's soul or consciousness is attached to the material world with a symbolic mechanism called a "silver cord," yoga experts say. The soul also must be aware of the location of the body in order to return. If it is not, the body dies.

Another yoga expert said she knew of no cases where a person died in attempting astral projection. She added that few yogi were capable of teaching it, let alone of trying the form.

Russian Boat and the Whales

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A few years ago the Greenpeace Foundation sailed three ships into a French nuclear test zone. Now it is involved in another protest maneuver — trying to block a Russian vessel hunting whales off the coast of northern California.

Officials of the Vancouver, B.C., ecological organization disclosed during the weekend that the 80-foot Phyllis Cormack had tried to subvert the whaling activities of a nine-vessel Soviet flotilla 50 miles east of Eureka, Calif.

Two men in a rubber raft from the Phyllis Cormack got between a Russian vessel and a whale but the Soviet fired a harpoon anyway at a whale Friday, according to radio reports. The harpoon narrowly missed the raft but hit the whale.

A spokesman for the Greenpeace Foundation said there has not been radio contact with the Phyllis Cormack since. But, he said, the vessel has had radio problems in the past.

Marine telephone operators were unable to make contact Sunday.

Several years ago Greenpeace sailed three ships into a French nuclear testing area near Tahiti to protest the blasts. The vessels' presence temporarily frustrated attempts to set off the explosives.

Greenpeace officials said the plan of the Phyllis Cormack "all along has been to put ourselves between the whalers and the whales."

George Korotva, one of the raft occupants, said that, when the Russian vessel fired at the whale, "they didn't care whether they blasted us out of the water or not. They could have killed us," a spokesman said.

Bob Hunter, a reporter for the Vancouver, B.C., Sun, was also in the raft. It was not known how many persons were in the Phyllis Cormack.

Matt Herron, a foundation representative, said the Russian flotilla consisted of the 300-foot factory ship Vostok and eight harpoon vessels, each about 150 feet in length.

Herron said the fleet was believed to have killed at least one undersize whale. And, he said, the foundation planned to protest to the United Nations, the International Whaling Commission and the Canadian government.

The Phyllis Cormack has conducted scientific tests to establish contact with whales through underwater electronic equipment transmitting music, Herron said.

Buttons and Bells Dropped by Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The U.S. Navy is discarding a tradition — its century-old uniforms of bell-bottom trousers, jumpers with neckerchiefs and white caps.

Beginning Tuesday, most sailors will wear a coat and tie ensemble with a visored cap similar to those worn by officers. Open-collared white shirts with short sleeves will be a summer option.

But Navy men who will be discharged within a year will be allowed to continue wearing their old uniforms as a reminder of the Navy's past, ensuring that the traditional garb will survive at least until the Bicentennial.

The old uniforms, first worn after the Civil War, had stars and stripes on the jumper flap and stripes on the cuffs, and represented a romantic era immortalized in such shows as "South Pacific" and "Anchors Aweigh" and by cartoon characters such as Popeye.

Before 1866, sailors were at liberty to design their own combination of stars, stripes, anchors, piping and other decorations.

The neckerchiefs were originally worn to protect the uniform from the tar that the old-time salts used on their pigtales. Pigtales went out of style about 1810, but the neckerchiefs hung on.

Also bound for extinction is the 13-button front flap on sailors' trousers.

Liberal Woods Resigns Party and City Posts

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON City Liberal Chairman Ronald F. Woods made it official today, announcing he has resigned as both Liberal chairman and as a member of the Koenig Administration because Mayor Francis R. Koenig and Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo switched to the Conservative Party last week.

Ironically, today is Koenig's 41st birthday. He was unavailable for comment on Woods' charges that he had "turned his back" on the Liberals who had supported him for his entire political career dating back to 1959.

"It is apparently his (Koenig's) opinion," Woods said, "that he can get more votes running on the Conservative line so now he has decided that he is a Conservative. And, perhaps, next year if it is politically more expedient Mr. Koenig will decide he is not even a Democrat but a Republican."

Koenig, apparently sees little difference between any of the parties. He told the Conservatives last Thursday night when questioned by his swing to the right that he (as mayor) saw no difference between Liberal and Conservatives or between Democrats or Republicans. At the same time Koenig also told the Conservatives that "it would not be consistent" for a candidate to accept both the Liberal and the Conservative nominations but then went on to say that if he didn't get the Conservative he would accept the Liberal.

Liberal county chairman Donald I. Short said the "chances will be very slim" that either Koenig or Gallo will be offered the Liberal nomination when the party meets tonight at Short's Washington Avenue home to wrap up its nominations. The party met last Wednesday night but Koenig was a Mayors Conference meeting in Sullivan County and Gallo said he was visiting a hospitalized relative in Poughkeepsie.

Short said that Woods' resignation came as something of a surprise but that he was in no hurry to accept it. "I don't think it's called for," Short said. "I think he's acting in haste. Let's just say that I'm going to give him plenty of time to reconsider."

Woods compared Koenig to former President Nixon. "Both Mr. Nixon and Mr. Koenig became obsessed with their power and apparently forgot those who put them in power."

Woods noted that the Conservatives have campaigned against Koenig personally in the past and have rarely supported any of his programs especially his plans to rebuild downtown.

"I am sure that Mayor Koenig's recent action will not have much effect on the voting public which knows that this type of dirty politics is an every day occurrence Woods said, "especially after we have just gone through (the) Watergate and CIA issues. But, in my opinion, many Kingstonians are very much disappointed in someone that we once believed in and tried to help as much as we could."

Woods, in his resignation letter to Koenig, said he did not wish to be part of a "Conservative administration."

"I assure you I worked very hard as a commissioner, as sometimes it seemed almost like a full time job," Woods said. He had been a leader in the city's tennis program and also worked actively in the areas of senior citizen recreation and aid to the handicapped.

"As you know, this is a very difficult decision for me as I was very proud to be a recreation commissioner and I enjoyed so much working with the children and adults of our city," Woods wrote. Koenig appointed him to the commission two years ago.

Burglar in Heating Duct Tough to Catch

NEW PALTZ

It took them nearly 12 hours, but New Paltz Police finally caught a South Carolina man who allegedly broke into Barker's department store Sunday after he crawled out of a heating duct in which he'd been hiding.

Police said they went to the department store shortly before 2 a.m. after an alarm was touched off. Certain they still had the burglar trapped in the store, police searched the huge building to no avail, and then brought in a dog from the Newburgh Police Department to aid them, still with no results.

Finally, shortly before 1 p.m. the burglar climbed out from a heating duct in which he'd been hiding, touching off a second alarm. He was quickly captured.

Police charged James Hull, 25, of Charleston, S.C. with third degree burglary, fourth degree criminal mischief and criminal possession of a hypodermic needle.

According to police, when they finally caught Hull they found he had allegedly stolen two pistols and two pellet gun revolvers, a holster, cigarettes and fishing tackle.

Following arraignment, Hull was jailed in lieu of $1,000 bail.

Meanwhile, in other area police matters:

Ulster County Sheriff's deputies charged a young Stone Ridge man with first degree burglary late Saturday following an alleged break-in at a Town of Ulster residence.

Deputies said the homeowner, James Price of Vista Drive returned to his house at about 9:15 p.m. to find it had been entered. He called police and then went upstairs and was confronted by a man with a knife. Price was able to keep the alleged burglar in the house until deputies arrived, authorities said.

Arrested was Jeffrey Brown, 21, of Atwood Road, Stone Ridge. He was jailed in lieu of $2,000 bail.

In Kingston, a New Jersey resident reported to police that his car was broken into Sunday night while parked on Cedar Street and that $700 in cash was taken from the glove compartment. Police said the car owner was Gene Saunders of Hamilton, N.J.

In the Town of Marbletown, Robert Krom, 24, of Kerhonkson escaped injury early today when his car ran off Route 213 and overturned. Sheriff's deputies said Krom apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his car. No tickets were issued.

In Dutchess County, a 52-year-old Staatsburg man, Charles Kendall, was listed in critical condition today in the coronary care unit at St. Francis Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

Dutchess County Sheriff's deputies said Kendall suffered a heart attack after his car was struck in the rear by a second vehicle at about 12:30 p.m. on Route 9G.

Ulster County Sheriff's deputies arrested Willie Mae Adams, 48, of Newburgh Sunday on a warrant charging her with first degree reckless endangerment.

Deputies said the warrant stemmed from a June 17, 1974 incident in the Town of Ulster when the woman allegedly threatened a deputy with a pair of scissors when he attempted to arrest her for shoplifting. She escaped then. The arrest Sunday came after Newburgh police arrested the woman for shoplifting and found she was wanted. She was jailed in lieu of $2,500 bail.

He Did It Again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Herman White was on leave from prison where he was sent for throwing his daughters from a third-story window. Police say he's done it again — this time from a fifth-floor roof.

Police said White, 29, was charged with two counts of attempted murder for throwing his daughters, Michelle, 3, and Pamela, 5, from the roof.

The girls were in critical condition Sunday with extensive internal injuries but a hospital spokesman said Pamela had shown "some improvement."

White was arrested Sunday at his brother-in-law's house. Police said he used the address as a hiding place briefly after throwing the girls out a third-floor window in November of 1973.

Detectives said White, who had a year to go on a prison sentence for the 1973 incident, had been given his second weekend furlough from a work release facility in New York City.

They said White went to the home of his common-law wife, Pauline Winfree, Saturday morning and picked up his daughters. Mrs. Winfree was out playing bingo at the time, detectives said, and White told the girls he was going to take them for a walk.

White then reportedly bought each girl a pair of sneakers before taking them to the roof of the Pacific Avenue building six blocks from their home. Police said he threw them to the courtyard below.

Det. Al Douglas, who arrested White in 1973, said the earlier incident happened after an argument between the man and Mrs. Winfree.

"He was mad at the Winfree woman — the mother," Douglas said, "and I guess he took it out on the kids."

Common Sense

The fate suffered by the Temporary State Commission to Study the Catskills was unfortunate. When the state legislature decided not to extend the commission's life it acted with shortsightedness and political expediency. There is no doubt that a long range planning program is essential to this area if it is to retain its unique character and at the same time be able to progress economically. There are too many land-hungry developers slaving at the mouth to turn their bulldozers loose and transform us into another Paramus. Fears of this, as voiced by Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, have increased now that the commission is all but dead. On the other hand, different fears expressed by other area legislators that the commission, once made permanent, would be a tool to further weaken home rule, also contains validity.

If the state legislators had acted upon this issue with a common sense approach, we all would have been benefited. A commission composed of essentially Catskill area people, aware of their obligation to preserve the beauty of the area, would have been the proper vehicle. Fears, however, that the unit would become a super agency dictated to by Albany helped lead to the projects demise. Governor Carey's insistence that the commission be peopled with outsiders probably contributed to the cancellation of the program as much as anything else.

Resettlement

The staff of a Senate subcommittee believes the resettlement of Vietnamese refugees in the United States of America should have been an "orderly, expeditious and relatively straightforward procedure" but has turned into a "nightmare" instead. The investigators may have been expecting too much.

For one thing, the 131,000 Vietnamese dropped in America's lap in the space of a couple of weeks. Our country has absorbed greater numbers of refugees in the past, particularly from Cuba and Europe, but under far different circumstances. Displaced persons arrived at a relatively slow pace, giving ample time for processing and matching refugee families with sponsors.

The sudden build-up of refugees on Guam and the necessity of setting up temporary camps for them on military bases in the United States created administrative bottlenecks that were inevitable. Some of the delays created by having so many federal agencies involved in the processing have been overcome. The fact that refugees are now moving out of camps at a rate of 600 a day may seem inadequate in view of the total still in the pipeline, but it is a major achievement considering that the first ones were leaving Vietnam less than two months ago.

Where a bottleneck must not develop is in the cities and towns of America where churches, charitable organizations and individuals need to mobilize their community resources to provide settlement opportunities for the refugees. That process, too, may require more time than critics of the refugee program would allow.

Berry's World

"The bad news is yours will become a 'disadvantaged family.' The good news is your kids will then be eligible for the federal summer jobs program!"

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON—While CIA officials squirm under the klieg lights on Capitol Hill, Soviet KGB agents are operating in the shadows of the same congressional corridors.

In the past few years, the KGB has stepped up its activities on the Hill. KGB operatives in a dozen guises have been slipping around to see key Congressmen and their aides.

Many congressional aides, as political appointees, are granted access to secret documents after no more than a cursory background check. Their leaks, although unwitting, could be serious.

Secret government files identify diplomat Boris Solomatin as the KGB "residentura," or operating chief, who first recognized how much valuable intelligence is available on Capitol Hill. Until his recent departure, he was the deputy Soviet envoy at the United Nations. His replacement, although expected soon, hasn't arrived.

Under Solomatin, the KGB "residentura" in Washington has been Dmitri Yakushkin, the brilliant Soviet embassy counselor. His KGB rank, according to the secret files, makes him second only to amiable Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin.

The files allege that Yakushkin directs a Washington spy ring, which employs diplomats, newsmen and sympathizers from countries friendly to the United States. Visiting delegations from Russia also are loaded with KGB experts, who know how to spot useful intelligence.

Officials indicate that Yakushkin concentrates on Capitol Hill where information is abundant and security is lax.

One of the most effective spies on Capitol Hill was pretty Galina Utekhina, a modish cultural attache, who moved in congressional circles and even began dating prominent figures on the Hill. The files identified her as a KGB Mata Hari, a fact which we revealed in a 1970 column. She quickly returned to Moscow.

The KGB appears to be most interested, according to officials, in intelligence about U.S.-China relations, SALT disarmament talks, MIRV missiles and U.S. computer technology.

The KGB reportedly also helps orchestrate the Soviet lobbying effort on Capitol Hill. Soviet diplomats, adcaideis, economists and others have sought particularly to persuade Congress to grant the Soviet Union "most favored nation" trading status.

A favorite KGB approach is through contacts from other countries. In the secret files, they are referred to as "third party nationals." Those who quietly lobby for Soviet views are called "agents of influence."

The KGB rings in visiting delegations may be technological experts, who can quickly size up a piece of U.S. equipment. Or they may be personnel experts, who sound out sympathetic Americans for recruitment as informants. This is called "talent spotting."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R.-Ariz., has quoted "very, very good sources," meanwhile, as alleging that foreign agents have actually infiltrated congressional offices. Our sources said the secret files contain no evidence that any members of Congress nor their employees, are spies.

Footnote: Yakushkin never returned our calls. A Soviet spokesman, however, said "I don't think it's true" that Yakushkin is a KGB spy chief. The spokesman added: "You are interfering in a very sensitive field."

ONASSIS CRASH: Sources close to the late Aristotle Onassis have told us that he privately blamed himself for his son's death in a 1973 plane crash.

The son, Alexander, had wanted to install some new parts and check out the plane. Because this had been neglected, say our sources, Aristotle Onassis felt personally responsible for the crash.

To relieve his conscience, he tried desperately to come up with evidence that the plane had been sabotaged and, therefore, that someone else had caused the accident. He offered a $500,000 reward for proof that the plane had been sabotaged. But there were no takers.

We contacted the pilot of the fatal flight, Don McCusker of Westerville, Ohio, who survived the crash without any permanent injuries. He said an investigation had established that the ailerons used to steer the plane had been misconnected. A check-out flight, he said, would have detected this.

Although the accident was caused by a defect in the plane, he still faces manslaughter charges in Greece. His trial has been scheduled for November 18.

He has been unable to contact heiress Christina Onassis, however, for help in meeting his expenses and settling the case.

LANGUAGE DISCRIMINATION: The State Department's prestigious Foreign Service Institute, which trains American diplomats in foreign languages, is struggling with a discrimination scandal.

On the theory that democracy begins at home, Spanish-speaking instructors have complained they must wait twice as long for promotions as teachers of such exotic tongues as Hindu, Hungarian and Swahili.

Instructors in German, French and other common tongues also are discriminated against, our investigation shows.

The institute's dean, James Frith, concedes there is unhappiness, but adds: "It's a matter of supply and demand."

Inside Report

Talking Turkey to Congress

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Although stopping short of one high-level private forecast that Turkey's link with NATO is now in deadly danger, President Ford's low key Oval Office appeal to several Congressmen for rapid House action ending the U.S. arms embargo clearly shook anti-Turkey Democrats.

The possibility of Turkey leaving the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance (NATO) under domestic pressure of escalating political hostility over the U.S. arms embargo, almost five months old, is viewed as real by one high-level administration official. His private forecast: if rising anti-Americanism over the arms embargo does indeed lead to closing down U.S.

bases in Turkey after July 17 (prior to the Turk-imposed deadline for lifting the embargo), Turkey might find itself in a chauvinistic spiral ending in a new, third-world foreign policy having no place for the Western defense alliance.

The arms embargo was imposed by Congress under pressure from pro-Greek politicians infuriated by Turkey's use of U.S. arms in the invasion of Cyprus last year. At the very least, it is now certain to lead to major changes in myriad bilateral agreements between Washington and Ankara.

With 500,000 men in uniform today, wholly dependent on U.S. weapons, Turkey is running out of replacement arms. Within the next few months the air force will be crippled if the arms embargo continues.

Outlining these hard facts in his 95-minute talk with six members of the House, Mr. Ford avoided inflammatory rhetoric and appealed for help. But he and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger agreed with Democratic Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, leader of the anti-Turk forces in the House, and Ohio Republican Rep. Charles W. Whalen, Jr., a broad-gauged member of the International Relations Committee, that the House would never pass the Senate-approved bill easing the embargo.

Some in-between course must be found to save face for pro-embargo leaders without satisfying their demands for Turkish concessions to Greece on the inflamed Cyprus issue.

The administration feels the embargo violates some treaty commitments to Turkey, both bilateral and NATO commitments. Politically, Turkey is seething with hostility against the U.S. over the embargo. It has forced Turkey to pay storage costs here for arms bought and paid for but barred from shipment by the February embargo (based on a proviso to punish countries using American arms for aggression).

With Portugal, NATO's western anchor, under increasing Communist influence, President Ford is now convinced that the deadlock between Turkey and the U.S. House of Representatives must be broken. If not, the loss of U.S. and Western influence in Turkey at NATO's eastern extremity would have a disastrous psychological effect throughout Europe.

Wallace and Wisconsin

Despite public assertions by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey that he would pick Gov. George Wallace of Alabama "against the field" to win next year's Wisconsin Democratic presidential primary, Wallace may wind up with a thimble-full or less of delegates there.

The reason: the Democratic-controlled legislature is not at all likely to amend the cherished, long-time Wisconsin "open" primary law to conform to new delegate-selection rules of the Democratic National Committee demanding good-faith efforts to fashion primaries in which only Democrats can vote. That would eliminate Republican cross-overs.

A half-hearted attempt to rewrite Wisconsin's law to fit the new party delegate-selection rules will start in Madison this week. It appears doomed.

That opens the anti-Wallace possibility that, whether held or not, the Wisconsin primary will not be the vehicle to pick Wisconsin's 68 delegates to the national convention. Instead, the delegates may have to be chosen by precinct and district caucuses. If so, Wallace might end up without a single delegate, a result that would not displease Democratic leaders in Wisconsin.

A footnote: The party's sentiment toward Wallace was expressed in a June 2 letter to Alabama national committeeman Mickey Griffin, a top committeeman Donald O. Peterson. Replying to Griffin's third letter asking for possible changes Wisconsin's delegate-selection rules (the first two went unanswered), Peterson wrote: "You and I know the letter you wrote (complaining about the lack of response) was 'flimflam.' If the Wallace forces are going to use this kind of ruse to cry foul, they'll be whistling Dixie."

The information Griffin had politely asked would be available from the national committee in July, Peterson said.

Tales of Our Founding Mothers

This time next year women of the American Revolution will achieve an acclaim not accorded 200 years ago. Abigail Adams, wife of John, distracted him at the Second Continental Congress by warning him of a kitchen revolution.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. If particular care and attention is not paid, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice."

Wives at that time were supposed to be dutiful and obedient to the whims of their husbands. John, a male chauvinist, wrote to Abigail: "As to your extraordinary code of laws, I cannot but laugh." The delegates, he said, would fight the "despotism of the petticoat."

The young men were off to war. George Washington, 31, a superb figure of a man, seldom smiled and never laughed because many of his teeth were missing, and the carved set of wooden molars had not arrived.

While the men were away, the women found little time to play. They assumed all the jobs. Who can forget Mary K. Goddard, who, at 38, owned Baltimore's biggest printing house, assumed the office of city postmaster, and set up a book store, where Thomas Paine's "Common Sense" was a best seller at 28 cents a copy?

Anna Katherine Green, wife of Jonas, had sufficient work bringing up his 14 children. When he died, Mrs. Green began to publish the Maryland Gazette. Before she died at 55, she was official publisher of the Colony of Maryland.

Women became butchers, ironsmiths, midwives and bootmakers. Eliza Pinckney was in her 50s when she decided to grow West India indigo as a dye. She used her father's plantation in South Carolina for experiments which endured for seven years.

It couldn't be done, but she did it. In 1775, thanks to Eliza Pinckney's work, South Carolina produced a crop worth over a million dollars.

Women of 200 years ago were smaller—so were the men—than today. Walk through the doorways of colonial homes and restaurants in Massachusetts Bay Colony now, and you will stoop if you are taller than five and one half feet.

Women averaged 4 feet 10 inches and were slaves to Eliza Pinckney's work. Their heroine was Marie Antoinette of Austria, who married the prince who would become Louis XVI of France.

It was she who devised the bouffant bell like dress, the bare bosom, and the two foot tall coiffure. When this spread to the colonies, the ladies learned that "doing their hair" required four hours of work.

First the hair had to be stiffened with non-odoriferous animal fat. It was then whitened with talcum. The hair was parted four ways. A wire frame two feet tall was set on the head. The hair was drawn up around it.

There were names for each coiffure, some of them deliberately tantalizing. One was called "sportsman in the bush." For evening entertainment, ladies placed birds' nests and stuffed colored birds atop their hair. Both were pinned on securely.

Many ladies slept in short-back chairs. The men, who once prided themselves on their long heavy periwigs, also whitened with powder, began to return to what Benjamin Franklin called "the natural look." They permitted the hair to grow long over the ears, then curled it upward with hot winding irons.

Almost all young ladies, and widows, practiced flirting. This could be done by smiling over the top of a fan, by squeezing a male hand during a coiffure, or by pretending to be in awe of a man's muscular frame. The bold ones walked ahead of a man and tilted the bell skirt from side to side so that he could see a small slipped foot and a peep of ankle. Very few men could withstand this approach.

Another instrument—or weapon—was the importation of colored parasols. These could be edged with lace and spun to attract attention.

I proposed to end this slender dissertation by saying to the women, "You've come a long way, Baby!" But then I wonder—have you?

Lawmakers Seek Industry Board

KINGSTON Because there has been little industrialization occurring in Ulster County in the past few years and because they feel it would be best to encourage development of light or clean industry both as a source of employment and a means of broadening the tax base, two county legislators are proposing the creation of an Industrial Development Board.

Legislator Louis M. Klein (D-Dist. 6) and Brian R. White (D-Dist. 8) will ask the Ulster County Legislature to conduct a feasibility study of the possible creation of a seven-member board. They suggest that it include the county planning director or planning board member, the chairman of the Ulster County Environmental Control Board or a member of that board; a representative of the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County; two representatives of currently operating industrial concerns in the county and two members of the Ulster County Legislature.

Citing their reasons for wanting the industrial development board, Klein and White said the economic climate of the county has been entrenched in a severe and prolonged depression and that unemployment has been on a steady increase.

"Some of Ulster County's largest industrial and commercial sources of employment have been forced to drastically reduce their number of employees and in some cases go out of business because of prevailing economic conditions," they explained.

Feeling that industrialization can best be encouraged by persons familiar with the needs, desires and interests of light, clean industrial enterprises, Klein and White would like the legislature to provide the citizens of the county with a safeguard against haphazard industrial growth which they said could threaten the environment, natural beauty and historical significance of Ulster County.

The two Democratic legislators ask that the county's Industrial Development and Publicity Committee make the feasibility study and that it be directed during its course of study to include conferences with representatives of local industry and the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County to elicit advice on the merits and/or anticipated functions of such an industrial development board.

Building N-Plant: 5,800 Jobs

CEMENTON About 5,800 jobs are expected to be created at the peak of construction of a nuclear power plant at Cementon.

Approximately 3,700 of these will be secondary or service jobs created as a result of the construction, the New York State Power Authority (SPA) estimated today.

These jobs will be in addition to the 2,100 workers directly involved in building the plant during the peak construction year.

The SPA also reiterated previous statements that the three cement plants in the area will be able to continue operations during and after construction of the power plant.

The estimates of construction and secondary employment will be included in an application for a certificate of environmental compatibility. The application to the New York State Board on Electric Generation Siting and the Environment is expected to be filed by the SPA next week. An application to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for a construction permit will be filed subsequently.

Other employment prospects also will be listed.

The permanent force for operation of the plant will consist of about 100 persons.

Approximately 175 secondary jobs are expected to be generated on a permanent basis as the result of plant operation.

In addition, approximately 100 temporary specialized employees would be involved in refueling the plant during a one-month period each year after operations begin. These workers will require transient housing. New York State experiences its peak demand for electricity during the summer months, and the SPA ordinarily schedules major maintenance at its generating plants at other times.

The creation of secondary and service jobs would result from economic activity spurred by the construction and operation of the plant. The employment opportunities can be expected to benefit Greene County as well as neighboring counties such as Ulster, Columbia and Albany, the SPA said.

The SPA applications will list a location about a mile north of this hamlet as the prime site for the 1,200,000-kilowatt plant, which has been scheduled for completion in 1983. A location at Athens will be listed as an alternate.

The plant will generate electricity for public agencies, including mass transit in the New York metropolitan area, and for the SPA's municipal system and rural electric cooperative system customers throughout the state.

It is estimated that about 12 million barrels of oil — 500 million gallons — or about three million tons of coal would be required each year to produce the equivalent annual electrical output of the nuclear plant.

There's Even An Art In Boiling Water, Says Former Foodaholic

By Dorothy A. Narel

"I must have tried every diet that was ever invented but jealousy convinced me to lose weight," admitted Mrs. Linda Mayer, a vivacious and attractive 32-year old who founded the Appetite Control Center. After she had married, almost 10 years ago, she felt she was in a "sardine can" and didn't quite like the fact that her husband "was looking at all the females with nice figures. I looked older and finally made the big decision — lose weight."

Mrs. Mayer lost 45 pounds on her program but it was only after having researched the topic of obesity with intensive care.

She pushed aside all the starvation diets, hard boiled egg diets, grapefruit diets, seafood diets, doctor diets, pills, shots, exercise clubs, even towel wraps.

"Nothing worked. Every time I would lose a large amount of weight, I would gain it all back as soon as I resumed normal eating habits."

Then in 1965, Linda went on the New York City Board of Health Obesity Diet. Not only did she effectively lose 45 pounds in three and a half months, dropping from a size 15 to 7, but the diet aroused her long-time interest in weight control and related subject matter.

That's when Linda Mayer started to study nutrition.

For the next five years, Mrs. Mayer read, analyzed and tested every theory she came across — from information obtained in New York City's Obesity Clinic to the New York State Department of Agriculture. She determined a standard for foods that could be tolerated by a dieter and how often these foods could be eaten.

Mrs. Mayer concurs with leading nutritionists that "a well-balanced, nutritious diet will help you to lose weight, remain healthy and teach you proper eating habits."

It was her husband, Gary, who convinced her to share her information and tested theories with other "foodaholics." That's when Appetite Control Centers were born.

The Hopewell Junction resident soon found herself immeshed in centers throughout Westchester, Columbia, Rockland, Dutchess, Orange, Putnam, Sullivan and Ulster counties and over the past six years more than 40,000 members have successfully participated in the program.

Mrs. Mayer was very emphatic about her theories and told LIFE that "we are similar to Weight Watchers, however, the amounts of foods allowed are different as well as the types of foods permitted. Also, the cost for participating in my program is cheaper than Weight Watchers and our diet is easier to follow. We also keep smaller classes than Weight Watchers and we deal with a tremendous number of children," she said.

On the subject of water retention, a real problem amongst dieters, Mrs. Mayer told LIFE the ACC program is extremely sensitive to foods that retain body fluids and instead emphasizes foods that act as natural diuretics. She also said: "More important, the program deals effectively with maintaining weight losses and our maintenance record is approximately four times higher than reputed industry levels."

The organization of ACC programming throughout New York State has led Mrs. Mayer to other activities as well. Two years ago she gave up lecturing herself to assist her husband, who is national director of ACC, in the administrative operation of the organization. She has authored a diet and cookbook relating to ACC theories and programs with specific recipes, menus and tips on eating. The book, Appetite Control Centers Diet and Cookbook, even investigates the art of boiling water.

"A good cook rarely lets foods actually boil in water," the author says. To demonstrate what she means, the author defines the various ways of boiling water — rapid, full and simmering.

"Sometimes, a recipe will specify that liquid merely should 'smile,' which means that the surface of the water should be like a calm sea with an occasional ripple," Mrs. Mayer says.

ACC programs in the area are held at the YWCA in Kingston; Masonic Temple in New Paltz; with two groups in Red Hook and nine in Poughkeepsie.

The Dutchess County Mayers, who were both born and raised in Brooklyn, have two children, a nine year old daughter and seven year old son.

KHS' First Participant In American Abroad Summer Program

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old self-supporting career woman. My parents are divorced, and I share a two-bedroom apartment with my father. We get along very well. At least we did until this problem came up. My dad has a girl friend. She and Dad sometimes go off together for weekends. I am a big girl, and I know they sleep together, which is none of my business. However, my dad tells me that his girl friend refuses to spend the night at his apartment as long as I am there, so I am sent away to spend the night elsewhere whenever he wants her over.

I didn't mind it occasionally, but now it seems that every weekend I'm getting kicked out of my own apartment.

My dad says he wouldn't mind if I stayed, but his girl friend does. What do you suggest I do? Should I have a woman-to-woman talk with her? She is 33; Dad is 46.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Forget the woman-to-woman talk. She's embarrassed, and I don't blame her. I think it's time you moved out and got your own apartment.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am a girl who is very much in love with a gay guy. We live together and get along beautifully. We like the same things, go everywhere together and have straight as well as gay friends.

He says that one day he will probably go straight because he wants to raise a family. He often talks about getting married to me, but the talk never leads to anything definite.

I understand his past, and it doesn't bother me.

Do you think I am foolish for waiting for him to go straight? And once he goes straight (if he ever does), will he stay that way? Or would I have to worry about his going gay again?

TROUBLED IN TRENTON

DEAR TROUBLED: If he is sufficiently motivated, with therapy and determination, he could possibly go straight—and stay straight. But the advice from here is: Don't marry him until he is straight and you're convinced that he's straight for keeps, which could be a long wait.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A. Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Luisa Granitto recently left for Mainz, Germany, as Kingston High School's first participant in the Americans Abroad Summer Program. Luisa had applied to be an exchange student last October, heard of her acceptance in February, and received word of her host country in early June. Germany is one of 60 countries involved with the American Field Service and Luisa is enthusiastic about her placement there. She will be hosted by a girl who shares her interest in art and music, living with her new "family" in an old, charming city on the Rhine.

Daughter of William and Anita Granitto of St. Remy, she recently finished her senior year at KHS while being a part-time student at UCC. Luisa is looking forward to beginning her freshman year at SUNY at Albany where she will be able to explore various areas of study. Several goals for that year are to learn Russian, participate in a Renaissance music ensemble, and become somewhat proficient on the Gaelic pennywhistle and bagpipes.

The Kingston AFS Chapter, one of many throughout the U.S., has existed for a year. A Chapter is responsible for hosting a foreign student in its community, and arranging to send its own "ambassador" abroad. Klaus Eisterer of Austria was the first guest student in Kingston, and a girl from the Philippines will be the next.

Ali-Bugner: A Question of Heat

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — The severe heat conditions under which they will be fighting was much on the minds of World Heavyweight Champion Muhammad Ali and challenger Joe Bugner as the two fighters went into the final hours before their 15-round title match here tonight.

"The heat is going to tell tomorrow," said Ali's longtime ring doctor, Ferdie Pacheco. "This is going to be a survival of the fittest with stamina under the heat being a vital factor."

Bugner's trainer-manager, Andy Smith, agreed.

"I doubt if there ever has been a major title fight ever held under more intolerable heat conditions than we are likely to encounter," Smith said.

Both Ali and Bugner said they were prepared for the heat, expected to be over 100 degrees in the ring, and the humidity, which will cause them to lose a pound or more a round each.

"I'm African and I have fought under severe heat conditions in Africa," Ali said. "It won't bother me. Europeans can't stand heat. I'll get to Bugner."

The 25-year-old Hungarian-born Briton, who holds the European heavyweight crown, went through a special training program set up by the Royal Air Force in Great Britain before he came here to wind up his training for his second match with Ali.

"That was more severe than plagued by people pressing him to continue fighting, at least for a third fight with Joe Frazier in Manila, which could earn Ali $10 million or more.

Frazier arrived for the fight Sunday and began taunting Ali, accusing him of trying to run out on the rubber match in their personal fight series which stands at one win each.

Frazier showed up at

at the time. "That heat's going to really take something outta you guys."

Repeating his prediction that the heat was a key factor in Tuesday's "battle for survival," Dr. Pacheco said, "There's nothing more they can do about it at this stage. If a fighter hasn't done his proper conditioning and training nothing is going to help

Dundee, predicted that his fighter would wear down Bugner in the early rounds and then knock him out. He predicted a ninth round knockout.

Bugner predicted a fast pace but he said he wasn't going to let Ali set it.

"I'm not going to be fooled by any of Ali's tactics. I'm going to fight my fight, not his. I think it'll go the distance and I'm going to win it."

At his last workout Sunday, Ali boasted of a Pearl Harbor Type "surprise attack" that could bring him a first round knockout victory over the big, blond Bugner.

"I have something I'm going to do in the first round that I've never done before," Ali said. "I have a form of attack. You know how the Japanese hit Pearl Harbor, by surprise. You remember the Japanese at Pearl Harbor. This will be a surprise attack."

"I want the Englishman," Ali said. "Fi Fie to fum, I smell the blood of an Englishman."

Bugner promised some surprises of his own after his last workout Monday but he did not elaborate.

SPORTS TODAY

I have found it here," Bugner said. "So I'm well acclimatized to conditions here. I can stand it. I can go the distance at whatever pace Ali wants."

In addition to the heat and the other normal pre-fight pressures, the 33-year-old Ali also was under other pressures connected with his announced intention to retire after the Bugner fight.

He said he was being

Bugner's final workout Monday morning and told the British boxer, whom he defeated in a 12-round decision, he was "looking good."

"You look fit, good, real good," Frazier said.

The ex-champion also talked about the heat and the problems it is going to cause.

"It's hot out here man," Frazier said, although there had been a cooling pre-dawn rain and the sky was overcast him, no amount of artificial physical stimulus is going to help him. This is going to be a battle of survival as far as physical fitness is concerned.

"I think Ali's strength, boxing experience and knowledge will tell in the early part of the fight and I think that possibly by the middle of the fight, Bugner will be pretty well through," added Pacheco, who has been Ali's doctor for 15 years.

No Burial for Trevino

LEE TREVINO AT PRESS CONFERENCE

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Lee Trevino, usually the happy-go-lucky Mexican on the pro golf tour, thinks he probably should have been buried this morning about 10:30.

Instead, Trevino, Bobby Nichols and Jerry Heard were released from Hinsdale Hospital Sunday after two days recovering from the effects of lightning bolts which struck near the three golfers Friday.

Trevino and Nichols withdrew from the tournament but Heard was back on the course Sunday. He shot a 74 and wound up in a tie for fourth at 143 going into today's final 36 holes.

The three golfers appeared at a news conference at the hospital in nearby Hinsdale, after which Trevino withdrew and left for his home in El Paso, Tex., where he plans to rest a few days. If given the okay by his doctor, he plans to leave Saturday to play in the British Open.

"I found out that a two-foot side hiller is not the most important thing in the world," Trevino said. "I may hit those things now without cleaning the ball. I thought by all rights they should be putting me in the ground at 10:30 Monday morning."

"It wasn't quite raining and I sent the caddy up to get some soft drinks, and the next thing I remember, it knocked me completely out of there," Trevino said. "It was a sensation I'd never felt before. My whole life was passing before me in about two seconds. I really thought it had me."

"It completely lifted me off the ground. It straightened me out and my hands were up in the air shaking. I couldn't move for two or three seconds and the lightning left and put me back down. I couldn't breathe. It was a sensation of somebody walking up behind you and hitting you as hard as he could on the left shoulder blade.

"At the hospital I had little welts on my back. I couldn't see them but they said they looked like little spiders."

"I'm still scared. I don't think I was as scared at first as I was when I got to the hospital and they put a thermometer in my mouth to take my temperature and I couldn't hold it there. It kept shaking out."

"The doctor said they don't have too many lightning victims to go by, so they have to treat it like an electric shock. Usually people don't live to talk about it. I was in the wrong place. That's all I can tell you. I'm lucky to be here."

Nichols, who said he probably would stay out of competition for three weeks, said "there was no buildup, no pre-warning. Just a flash and a big boom sound."

"I was laying on the ground and I got up and started running because I was scared more than anything else," he said. "I fell down and got up and started running again, through the trees and things."

Nichols said he suffered no immediate ill effects, but after he was in the clubhouse, "I was beginning to get a headache and felt a burning sensation in my mouth. So somebody said, 'We're going to take you to a hospital' — and I'm glad they did."

"Everybody is just a little sore. The doctor said to take a few days rest and it should go away. We were fortunate nobody got a direct hit. We got a wave or a burn or something to that effect," Nichols said.

Trevino and Heard were near the 13th green when they were struck. Nichols was on the fourth fairway during the second round of the $200,000 Western Open. The round later was canceled for the day and was postponed again Saturday due to unplayable conditions.

Wimbledon Women Having Their Woes

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Billie Jean King has painful knees. Margaret Court is only just recovered from an injury. Betty Stove is unseeded. Evonne Goolagong Cawley is on her honeymoon. Martina Navratilova is too heavy for speed on grass. Olga Morozova is erratic. Virginia Wade never plays her best at Wimbledon.

That thumbnail of the last eight in the women's singles of the $286,600 Wimbledon Tennis Championships omits only the top seed and defending champion, Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Only Miss Evert among the quarterfinalists has no obvious mental or physical hangups that might affect her progress to the semifinals in today's matches.

The bookmakers, from their busy tent on the grounds, have taken all this into account in naming the American girl an even money favorite to retain her title. Mrs. King is 9-2, Mrs. Court 7-1, Mrs. Cawley 9-1, the 160-pound Miss Navratilova 10-1, Miss Wade 12-1, Miss Morozova 25-1 and Miss Stove 100-1.

On the basis of the form the ladies have shown in the first week of a tournament, which has broken all records for paid admissions—nearly 200,000 in six days—Mrs. Court seems to be undervalued. The big Australian has not dropped a set and is convinced that she is completely recovered from the injury that had kept her from the professional circuit for some time.

Miss Evert, who had the easiest draw in the tournament, is improving with every match and doesn't figure to have any problems with Holland's Miss Stove.

But third-seeded Mrs. King of San Mateo, Calif., who has to use ice packs on her knees after playing, has not hit anything like her old championship form so far though she is playing well enough to advance to the semis over Russia's Olga Morozova.

In the other quarterfinal of the day Australia's fourth-seeded Mrs. Cawley, trying to combine a honeymoon and one of the most physically demanding tournaments on the circuit, plays the hometown hope, sixth-seeded Miss Wade, whose big hazard is the knowledge her own people are starved for a title and depending on her.

The first week of the 98th year of Wimbledon, the oldest tournament in tennis, produced the usual number of upsets and one-day wonders but nothing as dramatic as the departure—for good, he said—of 40-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia after a disputed line call.

Rosewall, the second seed, hit a shot towards the sideline at 6-7 and 15-30 in the third set of his match against his countryman, 16th-seed Tony Roche Saturday and a linesman ruled it good. Roche, under the new rules, advised the umpire that he considered the ball out. The umpire ordered the point played again.

The reversal obviously upset the veteran, a great favorite here, and he was never really in the match thereafter, losing in four sets.

"What happened in the last game of the third set changed the match," said Rosewall, who was trained to accept calls as they come. "Tony thought it was out. It was close. I just didn't know. This is where this new Umpire's rule doesn't seem to be right. There will always be some sort of dispute and at the moment any player can challenge a linesman's decision."

Said Roche:

"The ball was so far out I felt I had the right to appeal. The delay briefly upset my concentration. It may have been worse for Kenny. That set was the turning point of the match."

Variation On An Old Theme

Capital Crowd for Pele Largest Ever in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A crowd of 35,620—the largest ever to view a professional soccer match in the United States—turned out Sunday to see Brazilian superstar Pele and the New York Cosmos battle the Washington Diplomats.

Most obviously came to see Pele, and he didn't disappoint them, scoring two goals and assisting on two others as the Cosmos set a club scoring record in routing the Diplomats, 9-2, in a North American Soccer League contest.

Pele, who came out of retirement to join the Cosmos, scored unassisted in the 39th minute of the first half and in the 17th minute of the second half on a pass from former Brazilian teammate Manoel Maria.

Trailing 1-0, the Cosmos tied the game when Mordchai Shingler put a pass from Julio Correa in the net for the first of his two goals. They scored three more times during the half and twice in the first six minutes of the second half to take control of the game.

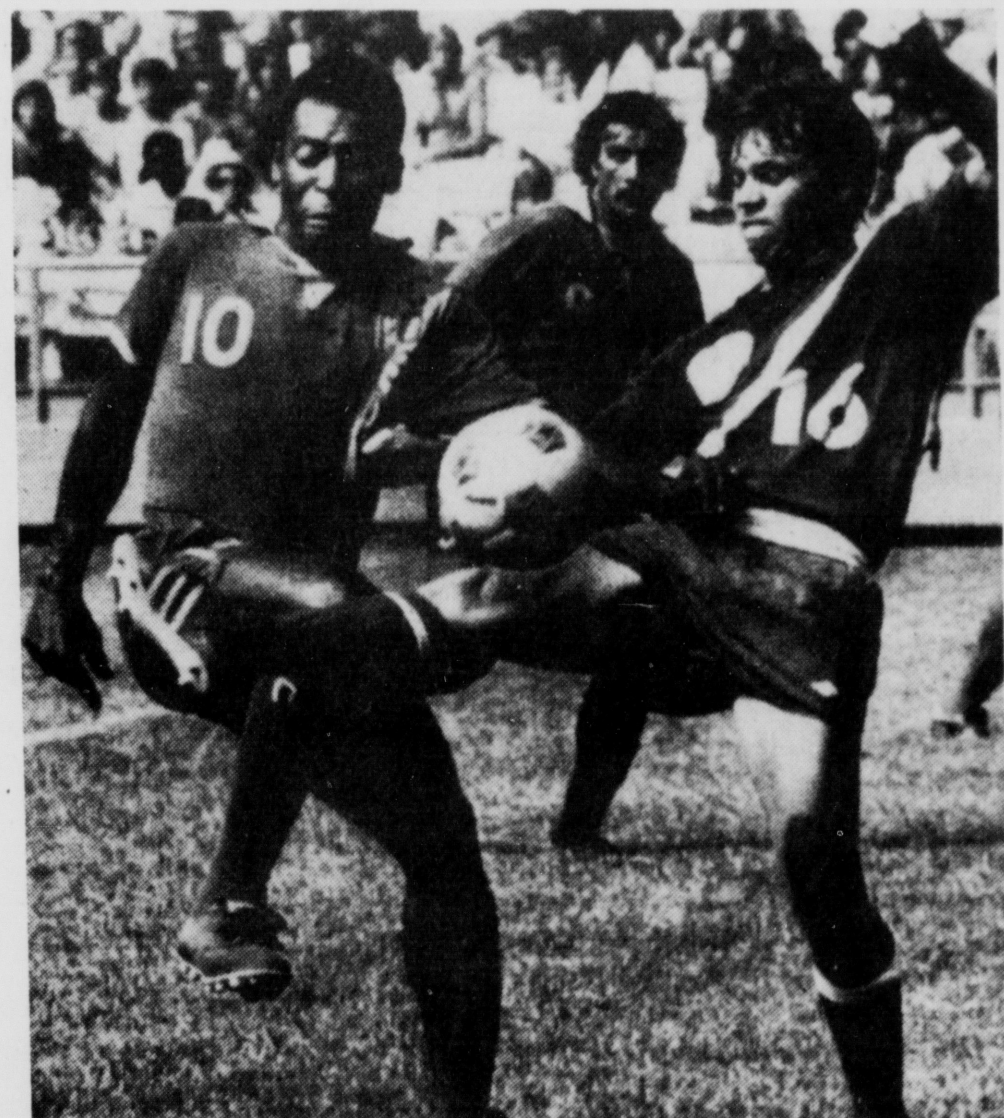

Pele said he thinks his club is improving.

"Even though we were down 1-0 we didn't change. It was a very tough game out there," he said. "We had some luck in the first half. After the second goal we really started controlling most of the game."

Despite the score, the Diplomats outshot the Cosmos, 30-23. Cosmos' goalie Sam Nusum had 12 saves, compared to seven for the Diplomats' George Teratsides.

Gary Darrell and Gerry Ingram scored the Diplomats' only goals.

The crowd easily shattered the previous NASL regular season record of 24,091, drawn last year at Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium for a Denver-Philadelphia game. On Aug. 20, 1968, an exhibition game in Oakland between the Oakland Clippers and Santos, Pele's old Brazilian team, drew 29,162.

Lesson in Fancy Footwork

Cosmos international soccer star Pele (10) gives Diplomats Roy Willner (16) a lesson in fancy footwork during second half of Washington, D.C. match Sunday. Record U.S. crowd watched Pele in action. (UPI)

Jo Anne Winner Again

TORONTO (UPI) — Joann Carner plans to take a week off from the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour after winning the $12,000 first prize Sunday in the $60,000 Peter Jackson Classic.

Mrs. Carner, 36, from Lake Worth, Fla., won the three-day, 54-hole tournament at the St. George's Golf and Country Club, defeating LPGA President Carol Mann, 34, from Towson, Md., on the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

"I'm going to take a week off and rest now," Mrs. Carner said. "Don (her husband) and I decided before coming to Canada that we would take a week off as we have to buy a new trailer."

She birdied the par four 407-yard 17th hole Sunday, sinking a 15-foot putt, while Miss Mann missed her third shot from about the same distance and had to settle for the $6,500 second prize.

Both competitors had par three's on the 175-yard 16th hole, the first of the playoff.

"They were at five under par 214 for 54 holes, forcing the playoff."

The tourney victory gave Mrs. Carner $46,518 thus far for the 1975 LPGA tour. She trailed the leading money winner, Sandra Palmer of Dallas.

Miss Palmer shot an even par 73 Sunday to go with her first two round scores of 74 and 75. Her 222 total earned $567.50 to bring her 1975 winnings on the tour to $55,279. Miss Mann moved into third spot in money winnings. She now has $36,526.

Mrs. Carner had nothing but praise for the luscious 6,265-yard course.

"This golf course is so wonderful I can't say enough about it," she said. "It certainly is better than any course we have played including the U.S. Open. We all have enjoyed playing here. Everyone has been just wonderful."

"My secret all week has been my little wedge and putter. I putted very well all week. That was the strong part of my game here. Carol had tough luck on both her putts (missing on two possible birdies in the playoff). The ball should have gone in for her."

Foyt Just Singing in the Rain

MT. POCONO, Pa. (UPI) — A.J. Foyt is like a kid singing in the rain today. He's $84,050 richer and discovered showers could be a man's best friend.

Foyt won the rain-shortened Pocono 425 Sunday, an event that marked the second time USAC's triple crown of racing program was terminated by inclement weather. Bobby Unser won a 435-miler at Indianapolis last month.

The entire day was a mass of frustrations for drivers, traffic control directors, pit crews and spectators. The race was delayed two hours, forcing a 3 p.m. start. Three days of rain produced mud that clogged the inside of the Pocono International Raceway.

But for Foyt, it was pennies from heaven. A.J. averaged only 140.712 mph as aaining average speed in a race slowed nine times by yellow caution flags.

"But it was work, man, it was work," Foyt explained. "Firstly, I kept changing tires after every pit stop and finally got the combination right. Then, when we saw the rains coming in the distance, I decided to push up the boost and get all the daylight I could when the yellow came out."

Foyt and Wally Dallenbach were the only drivers on the same lap at the finish. Bill Vukovich was third and Roger McCluskey, who was leading on the last lap two years ago when he ran out of fuel and lost to Foyt, finished fourth.

Winning Pocono Sunday, of course, was a great honor to Foyt, "but it pleases me to win any race, even a little midget race."

Did he have any close calls during the race?

"I like to do what Gordy (Johncock) did. Hit the wall." Johncock was running second to Foyt on the 140th lap when he spun on turn 2 and struck the retaining wall. He was shaken up, but walked back to the recreational van where his family was waiting after his medical checkup.

Dallenbach was extremely pleased with his second place finish. He was leading Indy when mechanical failure forced him out late in that race.

Wally elected to run with an old Offy engine here, rather than the new motor that his teammate, Johncock, was using. Despite drawing 100 horsepower less than Gordie, Dallenbach had the proper motor to finish the race.

Could he have passed Foyt at any time during the race? "No. You saw everything I had," said the Colorado cowboy. "I was handling superbly, but my engine was running like a pussy-cat, while A.J.'s was going like a tiger."

Foyt led for 115 laps during the race, Johncock was in front on 29 laps. The only other driver with any consistency was Duane "Pancho" Carter, who held command for 12 laps. Other lap leaders were Jim Caruthers, 5; Vukovich, 4; Mario Andretti, 2; Jerry Grant, 2, and Steve Krisiloff, 1.

But the stroke which gave him the lead came on the last lap.

"I drove in the left rough," he said, "and I started to chip out to the fairway. But the ball was sitting up high and I had a little opening. It was about 170 yards to the green, so I took a six iron and let fly."

"The ball sailed like I expected, hit in front of the green and rolled up 35 feet from the hole. I wasn't really trying to make birdie. I just wanted to reach the front of the green. Then I hit it and when it was 10 feet from the hole, I knew it was going in. It took a little curve and went on in the hole."

Johncock wound up with the second 66 ever shot on the par 71 7,002-yard course and a 36 hole total of 138, four under par, and one stroke ahead of Irwin, the 1974 U.S. Open winner who ranks third in earnings this year with a tournament win at Atlanta four weeks ago.

Irwin also came from behind. He had a first-round 71 and then shot a 74 Friday before rain washed out all scores. "I got a tremendous break," he said of the 68 when the round finally was played, putting him into the lead until Johnson took it away.

New Expression for Johnson

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — The role of pace setter midway through a top tournament on the pro golf tour is one George Johnson never has experienced.

But today he'll be there, facing the pressure and the heat of competition from both 74 challengers and a 90-degree temperature in a 36-hole double round to decide the winner of the $40,000 top prize in the $200,000 Western Open.

Johnson, though victor in three second-tour events, never has been this close in one of the big time tournaments. "I was second at Philadelphia after the second round," he said.

"I didn't do too good the last two rounds."

Sunday Johnson did well. Playing in one of the last threesomes in the second round at Butler National golf club, he had plenty of opportunity to fold, and he didn't.

He started the day one over par, gained one stroke on his first nine and then carved out five pars and four birdies to come from behind and pass leader Hale Irwin. In the stretch he hit birdie putts of eight, 30 and 12 feet, and he salvaged a par on one hole when he used a nine iron out of a trap, a sand wedge to the green, and sank a 12 footer.

BASEBALL

McGraw Impressed by Muscles

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

"Tug McGraw, author of the New York Mets' famous battle cry 'You gotta believe' when they stormed to the National League pennant in 1973, has a different point of view this season with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"When I look around this clubhouse and see all those muscles," McGraw says, "I gotta believe."

"This is the most powerful club I've ever pitched for," McGraw said Sunday after the Phillies defeated the Mets 9-6 and 4-3 in 12 innings with McGraw allowing a total of one hit in seven innings of relief pitching. "We've got ability everywhere."

McGraw earned his eighth save of the season with three perfect innings in the opener and came back to win his fifth game with four shutout innings during which he allowed one hit. With a 5-3 record and eight saves he has re-established himself as one of the game's best relief pitchers after a poor 1974 season.

Larry Bowa's triple and Ollie Brown's two-run homer were the big blows of the first game in which the Phillies scored seven runs in the first two innings. Apparently beaten by Tom Seaver after eight innings of the second game, Philadelphia tied the score in the ninth and won it in the 12th when Greg Luzinski hit his 19th homer of the season.

The shakedown of the NL East continued when the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-3 and 7-0. The once-closely grouped six teams are now strung out with the Pirates holding a three-game lead over the Phillies, a 6 1/2 game lead over the Mets and on up to 11 games over the last-place Montreal Expos.

The Pirates won the first game of their doubleheader when Al Oliver hit a two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning, bringing reliever Dave Giusti his third win. Jerry Reuss pitched an eight-hitter and Willie Stargell had three hits, including his 13th homer, in the second game.

Moment of Truth for Ex-Dolphin Aces

SENATOBIA, Miss. (UPI) — Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield probably will learn today whether their friendly reception they've been getting from their new teammates is genuine.

The former Miami Dolphins, who started training camp with the Memphis Southmen at Northwest Mississippi Junior College Saturday, face their first intrasquad scrimmage with the World Football League team. The ferocity of licks passed will be a sincere indication of acceptance or resentment.

No far, there's been no apparent Memphis player resentment against the three superstars, enticed away from the Dolphins and the National Football League by $3.5 million.

"I haven't encountered any resentment at all," said Warfield.

Kiick said he, too, feels the Southmen players have accepted the Miami trio.

"I'm going to contribute to this football team," said Kiick, who was unhappy at Miami because he felt shorted on playing time. "If I start, fine. If I don't, that's okay, too."

Coach John McVay said he expects no problems with the addition of Csonka, Kiick and Warfield to the team.

"They just want to be one of the boys—they work hard," he said. "I think the attitude has been more of a 'welcome aboard' than it has been any reservation on the part of our players. They all want to come up and say 'hello' and shake their hands."

Csonka is not enamored of training camp, friendly or otherwise.

"I haven't liked training camp before and I don't like it now," he growled, wiping sweat from his face following a two-hour drill. "It's a necessary evil. Each year you get a little older and it gets a little tougher."

Kiick's competition for a starting position opposite Csonka in the backfield will come from John Harvey and Willie Spencer, who played on last year's 17-3 Southmen squad.

Spencer is one of four veterans who, as of Sunday, had not reported to training camp to join 35 rookies and free agents who survived a week of two-day workouts and a Friday scrimmage. McVay said, however, that Spencer has agreed to a contract and was to report today.

The coach learned Saturday that D.D. Lewis, a Dallas Cowboys linebacker, had decided to stay in Dallas rather than join the Southmen.

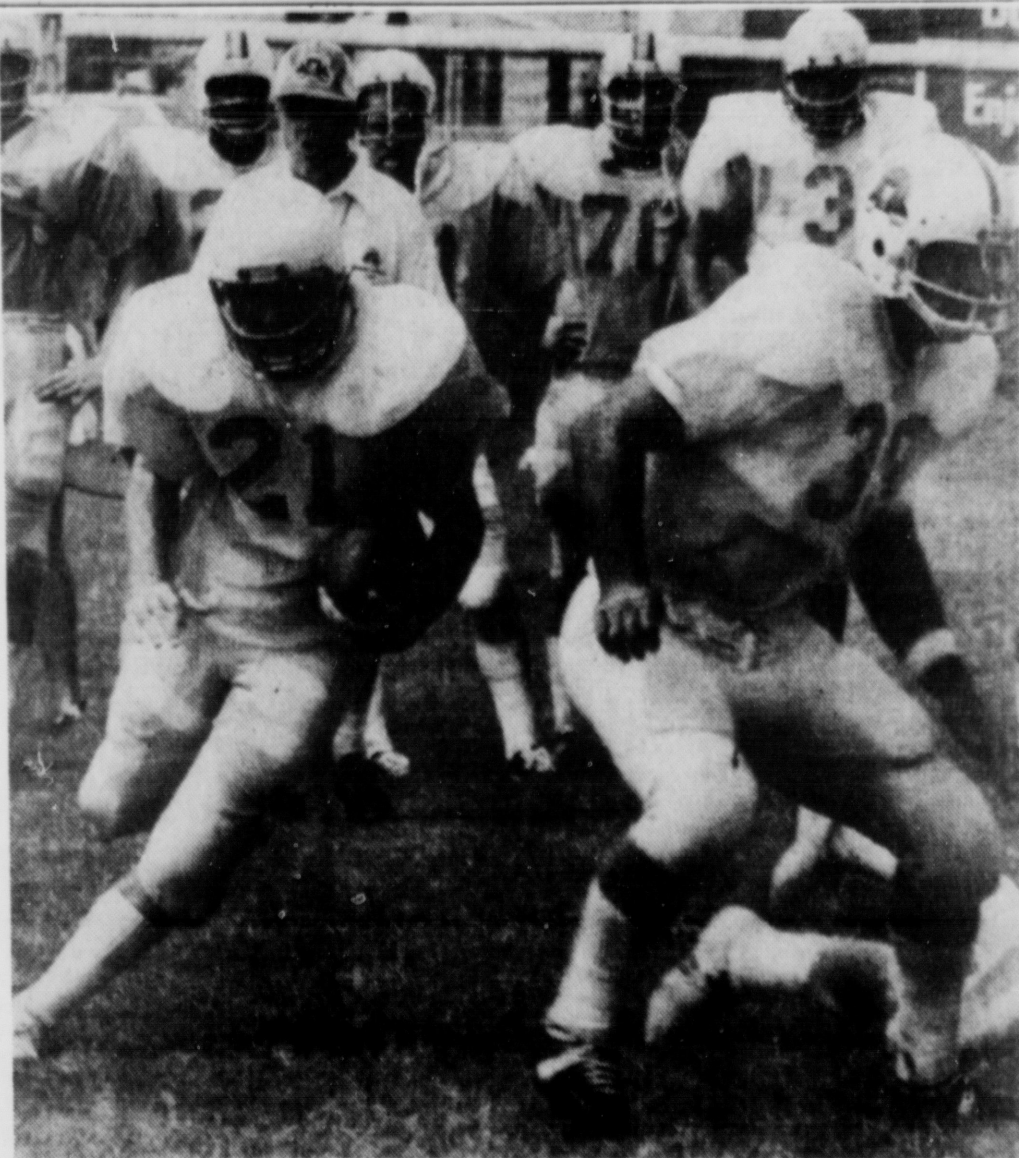

"You hate to lose a player with Lewis' ability, his smartness," McVay said. "But this is what he wanted."

Two veteran guards, Ron Mikolajczyk and Charles Bray, were late to camp Sunday. McVay said contract talks with the four missing vets will continue.

He said the veterans reported in "super, excellent shape" and that all 75 players in camp would work primarily on conditioning and timing for the next several days, with no cuts expected for at least a week.

The Southmen have a controlled scrimmage with the Vulcans in Birmingham Thursday.

McVay said the roster will be reduced to 50 by the first exhibition game at Southern California July 14, to 45 by the second exhibition game July 19 at San Antonio and to 32 actives and eight taxis by the opening of regular season competition against Jacksonville on Aug. 1.

Blocking For A Pal

Larry Csonka (39) blocks for former Miami Dolphin teammate Jim Kiick (21) during their first full training camp workout with the World Football League's Memphis Southmen Saturday in Senatobia, Miss. They are wearing the same numbers they wore as Dolphins. (UPI)

Ali-Bugner Title Bout On Monticello Screens

MONTICELLO

Monticello Raceway will be open tonight for a full card of harness racing, but the main attraction for many of those in attendance is the exclusive area showing of the Muhammad Ali-Joe Bugner bout from Malaysia.

The heavyweight championship fight is expected to be aired at about 10:15 p.m. EST. It will be preceded at 8 p.m. by the Monzon-Licata middleweight and the Galindez-Ahumada light heavyweight championship 15 rounders which will be beamed from Madison Square Garden.

All three bouts will be seen on all MR's TV screens at no extra cost to race-goers. There will be no home TV or radio.

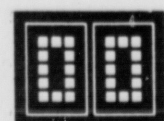

The Raceway also announced that beginning Tuesday it will move its post time from 8 to 8:30 p.m. to accommodate the guests at the many Sullivan County Catskills resorts. Saturday and Sunday afternoon racing will continue to begin at 2:30 p.m.

Sickler's, Drywall Cop Senior BR Contests

KINGSTON John Bouck threw five innings of strong relief for Sickler's Delivery in the Senior Babe Ruth League, but it was his two-out double in the last of the seventh that drove in the winning run in an 8-7 victory over the Moose Club.

In other Babe Ruth action, J & G Drywall defeated Kingston Trust, 8-2.

Neither starting pitcher was effective in the Sickler's-Moose battle, so in the third inning Bob Nissen took over for Guy Turk, and Bouck replaced Mark Berardi with the score tied, 6-6. The Moose reached Bouck with a go-ahead run in the fourth, but the winners tied it again with a sole run in the fifth. Steve Grieco was aboard in the last inning when Bouck cracked the game-winning.

Howard Williams led the early Sickler's offense, belting a triple, a double and a single to drive in five runs. Tony Turk and Guy Turk shared three RBIs for the Moose.

Dave Kronk walloped a three-run homer in the second inning to help overcome a strong pitching performance by Kingston Trust's Dave Loeffler. Loeffler fanned 14 and walked only four, but he gave up nine hits over the distance.

Mike McWeeney threw a six-hitter to pick up the decision, having most of his trouble with Loeffler who had half the losers' hits.

The FBI said Sunday the arrest of Herman Thunder Hawk was a sign of progress in the search for the Indians. But the agency is not certain Thunder Hawk was at the house near Oglala where the slayings occurred Thursday.

Thunder Hawk was one of four persons named in a warrant that led to the shooting deaths of FBI agents Jack R. Coler and Ronald A. Williams, both 28 and from Los Angeles.

The agents had gone to the house with a warrant for another of the four wanted men—James Theodore Eagle—when they were shot down.

Eagle and Hobart Horse were at large on charges of assault and kidnaping. The fourth suspect, Teddy Paul Pourier, was arrested Thursday before the shooting occurred.

One Indian apparently died in a shootout that followed the slayings. He was identified by the FBI Sunday as Joseph Bedell Stuntz, 24, of Couer D'Alene, Idaho. Stuntz was registered with the Lapwai Indian Agency in Idaho.

Despite Thunder Hawk's apprehension Saturday, Thomas Coll, an FBI spokesman, said there was no evidence to link him to the house where the shootout took place.

"We don't know if he was in the house," Coll said.

The FBI apparently agreed with sources who said the 16 persons were not on the reservation. On Sunday, some 275 agents participating in the manhunt began placing more emphasis on searching areas around the reservation.

Senate Study Shows CAB Violated Own Rules and Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate study reports the Civil Aeronautics Board has violated its own rules, and perhaps federal law while acting to protect the interests of airlines at the expense of travelers, the New York Times reported today.

The newspaper said the charges were made in a draft report of the Senate subcommittee on administrative practice and procedure and was based on the testimony of a variety of airline industry witnesses, the Airline Pilots Association, and six federal agencies.

The report, according to the Times, said if the board adopted policies permitting increased competition between airlines, it was possible to provide service "with fares on many major routes 30 to 40 per cent lower than at present."

To achieve this, the report recommended that within six years any airline that if "fit, willing and able" should be allowed to supply air service on any route and that existing airlines be allowed to fly on new routes as soon as possible.

The Times quoted the report as saying that during the last five years the CAB had "primarily sought to protect the regularly scheduled airline industry and to promote scheduled service."

The report said such action is not necessarily harmful to consumers, "But when the interests of the industry and those of the consumer have diverged, the board has chosen to protect the industry at the expense of the consumer."

The most serious action, according to the report, was the closing of an investigation by the CAB into possible illegal campaign contributions by 34 airlines before the inquiry was completed.

The Times, quoting the report, said its testimony on the 1973 decision to close the inquiry "reveals a strong likelihood of highly improper and possibly criminal behavior on the part of board members themselves."

The subcommittee also said a record of the hearing had been referred to the Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution.

The report, as noted by the Times, also said several route scheduled hearings were improperly ordered postponed, and another transportation policy was adopted at the private request of executives from the major airlines without holding a hearing where consumers and others could voice their opinions.

NAACP Warning to Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is a "pleasant man (who) means well," in the eyes of many blacks, but if the administration does nothing to alleviate black unemployment "we will live to regret it," says NAACP director Roy Wilkins.

He and NAACP national chairwoman Margaret Bush Wilson said Sunday the high unemployment rate among blacks could revive racial conflict.

"They made their comments in a televised interview (ABC-TV's Issues and Answers) on the eve of the NAACP's national convention, which Ford may address."

"Mr. Ford has impressed black Americans like he has impressed everyone else, that he is a pleasant man, that he means well and that he acts as they would act if they were in that high position," Wilkins said.

Both Wilkins and Mrs. Wilson responded affirmatively when asked whether they think the unemployment rate, always much higher among blacks than among the population as a whole, might cause "a new crisis of race relations."

"I get the impression ... that we are leading up to a confrontation, that if we cannot solve our black unemployment problems we will live to regret it," Wilkins said.

Asked whether he meant "a return to the streets" is possible, Wilkins said:

"That is a remote possibility, let's say. But I'd say that everything short of a return to the streets will be brought on by the continuing unemployment among blacks."

Mrs. Wilson said "black people are in a depression, really, and this is frightening and disconcerting and there is no telling where this will lead."

Mrs. Wilson described as "incredible" Ford's decision, in a recent message on crime policy, to stress mandatory sentences for criminals.

She said the administration has failed to do "creative thinking" on how to get at the causes of crime and solve "the basic problems in a long-term fashion."

Search Goes On

OGLALA, S.D. (UPI) — The FBI is seeking 16 Indians it believes were involved in the ambush slayings of two of its agents. But as of early today, it had arrested only one man in its search of the 5,000-square mile Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

The FBI said Sunday the arrest of Herman Thunder Hawk was a sign of progress in the search for the Indians. But the agency is not certain Thunder Hawk was at the house near Oglala where the slayings occurred Thursday.

Thunder Hawk was one of four persons named in a warrant that led to the shooting deaths of FBI agents Jack R. Coler and Ronald A. Williams, both 28 and from Los Angeles.

Blood Pressure

SHANDAKEN
The importance of having blood pressure checked and the consequences of untreated high blood pressure were explained at a recent meeting of Ulster County Town Public Health Committee Presidents by Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto.

Town public health committees are assisting public health nurses of the county at adult health clinics where blood pressures are checked along with other health needs.

Dr. Dutto also discussed the effectiveness of treatment of high blood pressure in preventing strokes, heart attack and heart trouble.

Most areas in the county have a place where an adult can have his blood pressure checked frequently and if necessary he is referred to his physician. A schedule of blood pressure clinics is available by calling the Ulster County Department of Health in the County Office Building.

There were five town committees at the Shandaken meeting including Woodstock, Saugerties, Olive, Lloyd and Shandaken. The host committee was under the direction of Mrs. Percy Rosa.

High Court Affirms Right to Counsel Self

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6-3 today that a defendant has a constitutional right to act as his own attorney in a criminal case.

The decision came on appeal by Anthony Pasquale Faretta, convicted of grand theft after a jury trial in Los Angeles County Superior Court.

The judge at first agreed to let Faretta represent himself at the trial but later withdrew permission and appointed the public defender as defense attorney.

Faretta was sentenced to 10 years in prison as the law prescribes, but has since been paroled.

Justice Potter Stewart, who spoke for the majority, said the constitutional issue is not an easy one.

"The question is whether a state may constitutionally hail a person into its criminal courts and there force a lawyer upon him, even when he insists that he wants to conduct his own defense," Stewart said.

"It is one thing to hold that every defendant, rich or poor, has the right to assistance of counsel, and quite another to say that a state may compel a defendant to accept a lawyer he does not want," the opinion said.

"The value of state-appointed counsel was not unappreciated by the Founders, yet the notion of compulsory counsel was utterly foreign to them. And whatever else may be said of those who wrote the Bill of Rights, surely there can be no doubt that they understood the inestimable worth of free choice."

The opinion recognized that when an accused manages his own defense he relinquishes many of the traditional benefits associated with the right to counsel. But it noted that Faretta "clearly and unequivocally declared to the trial judge that he wanted to represent himself and did not want counsel."

The record shows Faretta as "literate, competent, and understanding, and that he was voluntarily exercising his informed free will," Stewart said.

The judgment of the California Court of Appeal was vacated and the case sent back there for further proceedings.

Dissenters were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist.

Burger said the decision is another example of "the judicial tendency to constitutionalize what is thought 'good.'"

"There is nothing desirable or useful in permitting every accused person, even the most uneducated and inexperienced, to insist upon conducting his own defense to criminal charges," the chief justice said.

"There is no constitutional basis for the Court's holding and it can only add to the problems of an already malfunctioning criminal system."

McCardle to Retire

KINGSTON — Francis J. McCardle, well known funeral director, who has operated a funeral home business in Kingston for more than 26 years, announced his retirement today as of July 1, 1975.

After attending local schools he was graduated from the Collier Institute of Embalming in New York City and licensed to practice funeral directing in October 1941. After a period of employment in New York with Walter B. Cooke, Inc. and the Thomas M. Quinn Funeral Home of Queens, he managed the Kivlin-Campbell Funeral Home in Schenectady for the owner, the late State Sen. Thomas F. Campbell. Returning from Schenectady, he opened his own funeral business in 1949 at 99 Henry Street.

The past three years he has been the licensed manager of the McCardle-Leahy Funeral Home, Inc., 27 Smith Avenue.

In 1951 he was appointed a county coroner by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to fill the unexpired term of the late Ernest A. Kelly. He was elected to that position for three consecutive terms. During his administration as a county coroner, he was instrumental in the adoption of the present County Morgue where more modern technique and scientific skill could be employed in the performance of post-mortem work. He gave the county its first official reporting system to be used by coroners.

Active in political, civic and fraternal affairs he was a Republican committeeman from the old Tenth Ward for more than ten years, past Exalted Ruler of Kingston Lodge No. 550, B.P.O. Elks, member of Kingston Council No. 275, Knights of Columbus and Wiltwyck Hose Company.

McCardle resides with his wife, the former Gertrude B. Pardee, and son, Francis Jr., on Linderman Avenue.

Reject

SAUGERTIES — The Saugerties Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has rejected an appropriation from the town board because it came from local tax money.

The chapter issued a statement saying the contribution to "Stone Houses of Saugerties Township," a bicentennial book, was being sought from state or federal funds.

Manhunt For Prison Escapees

LISBON (UPI) — The military today threw helicopters, troops and "civilian vigilantes" into a massive manhunt for 75 ex-convicts still at large after a break from Portugal's new maximum security prison.

The Military Security Command said roadblocks were put up all over the country — especially near the border with Spain.

The escapees were officers of PIDE — International Police of the Defense of the State — the feared secret political police of the former right-wing dictatorship.

A military communique said, "The breakout was made just after the prisoners' supper (Sunday). They cut the bars of several cells and then escaped on makeshift ladders made from iron bars from the beds and sheets."

The communique said that by early this morning 13 of the 88 escaped prisoners had been recaptured.

They were among 843 ex-PIDE agents who were held in Alcoutre prison, 40 miles north of the capital. PIDE officers were among the first persons arrested when the Armed Forces Movement seized power in April last year.

News reports said that two walls of the new prison had not yet been wired for alarms and that the internal television security system had been disconnected for the past week.

Construction of the prison was begun in 1959 and the Portuguese considered it one of the most secure in Europe.

The military communique said, "We ask that all revolutionary vigilance of the Portuguese people be serene and organized within the military and militarized forces."

Proposal on Raft

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Anthony John Pike met Australian fashion model Jennifer Robyn Fairfax-Ross three years ago. But it took three days adrift in the ocean on a six-foot life raft to convince him he should marry her.

"The qualities she showed on the raft convinced me," the bearded Pike said. "She remained cheerful and never blamed me for getting her in this position."

"I figured, a woman like that, if I don't marry her someone else would get her."

Pike, 41, and Miss Fairfax-Ross, 27, arrived from Nassau Saturday and told reporters of their three-day ordeal in a life raft off the coast of Haiti, and of living on raisins, fresh water and the raw flesh of a sea gull.

They were rescued June 23 by the S.S. Fairwind, a cruise ship.

"Robyn has wanted to get married for some time," said Pike, a British citizen who met his future bride three years ago in Hong Kong. "I have been through two unsuccessful marriages and I didn't really think it was necessary."

Then came the ordeal with his attractive girlfriend-shipmate.

"I proposed on the raft," he said.

Pike and Miss Fairfax-Ross also went through an informal ceremony on the raft where "we said anything we could think," Pike said.

The couple plan to marry legally as soon as they get a license. Pike's 40-foot schooner, Gypsy, capsized

June 21 en route from South Caicos Island to Haiti.

"When we first got in the raft it was a bit like a picnic — you know, opening up packets of food and all," Miss Fairfax-Ross said. "Then you look around and there's all this ocean, and we realized nobody knew we were missing and we could be out there for months. That was a terrible shock."

The couple's hopes dwindled considerably as ships that passed close by failed to notice the flares Pike shot. He said he was down to the last flare when the Fair Winds spotted them.

The couple said they took turns paddling during their three days at sea and had blisters to prove it.

They said they would keep the life raft in the living room of their home as a reminder of their sea adventure.

Senate Wrestling With City Money Woes

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state senate wrestled today with a Republican-sponsored bill linking new taxing authority for New York City with increased aid for the state's financially pressed school districts.

The question of how many New York City employees will be laid off in the fiscal year, beginning Tuesday, depends on what action the legislature takes to give the city new revenues.

The measure put forth by Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson ties $277.5 million in new taxing power for the city to a bill providing $260 million in increased education aid.

Senate Democrats were expected to challenge the combining of the two issues. A spokesman for Minority Leader Manfred Ohrenstein said Sunday the Manhattan Democrat would offer an amendment separating the tax and school aid proposals.

The spokesman said Ohrenstein would also submit a new bill providing the city with $388 million in new taxing power, the same amount approved by the Democratic-controlled Assembly Friday.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame had requested some $460 million in new taxes to avoid part of the massive layoffs he said were made necessary by the city's financial troubles.

Beame was scheduled to fly to Albany today in what he described as a "last ditch effort to head off what may be the worst crisis in the city's history."

Ohrenstein's proposals were endorsed by Gov. Hugh L. Carey, who criticized the Republicans for linking the city and school aid measures.

"Taxing power for the city is a local matter — a matter of home rule — and logically and traditionally has no relationship to the statewide issue of education," Carey said.

In other budget developments: — A Beame spokesman declined comment on a published report that a draft audit by State Comptroller Arthur Levitt's office showed there had been hidden deficits totaling $2 million in the city's budget over the last two years. The report said the deficits were the result of bookkeeping errors.

— Union members' Association President John DeLury said he did not think he could prevent a wildcat strike if the city wins its court battle to lay off 2,934 of his union's 10,300 members.

— Board of Education President James Regan said the cuts listed in the mayor's "crisis" budget would reduce school payrolls by 17,000 persons next fall and be a "gigantic step backwards educationally" for the city.

For Tuesday, July 1, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your methods are overly aggressive today in dealing with associates, results will be undesirable. Try tact and charm instead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You are likely to have a few more responsibilities today than you can manage. Delegate chores to others where possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

The next few days, be particularly prudent with your resources or the budget you've set for this week won't stretch.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Early in the day you're apt to become too easily irritated if things don't go your way at first. Later, a calmer head prevails.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If faced with a problem with no apparent immediate solution, you could get the answer by walking away from it for awhile.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make it a point not to impose upon friends today and tomorrow for anything material. It's unlikely your requests will be granted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In dealing with forceful individuals today, don't reply in kind. Use your head, not heated words.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Not a good day to try to get others to do things you should be doing. You're better off not asking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There could be some complications socially today if you're not selective regarding companions. Be careful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Domestic demands today may be a bit heavier than usual. Try to get other family members to pitch in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your temper is on an extremely short fuse, especially where persons are doing work for you. Don't provoke them unnecessarily.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep your budget buttoned down the next few days. Buy only what you need, when you need it.

Your Birthday

July 1, 1975

There will be some excellent opportunities for you this year to receive recognition and advancement from creative projects. Put your ideas to work. This'll prove profitable.

MARRIAGE? (Q.) My boy friend and I want to get married, but we know that our parents will not let us. I am 16 and he is 17. What we want to do is tell our parents that I am pregnant so that we can get married.

Then after we are married we will tell them the truth, that I am not pregnant. Do you think this is wise? — READY IN TEXAS

(A.) No; it is quite the opposite — foolish. Do not try it. Wait until you are at least 18 before considering marriage, perhaps by then you will be mature enough to face the reality of married life, including pregnancy — if it happens.

COMPETITION: (Q.) Julie is my girl friend. She is going with Donald. The problem is Chris. Chris is going with Donald's boy friend, but she is very immature and keeps loving up to Donald.

I have told Chris to shape up but she doesn't get my message. She goes right ahead trying to take Donald away from Julie. How can I get Chris to mind her own business? — BUGGED IN ALABAMA

(A.) Julie may have a problem, but it is her problem. Let her handle it.

I am afraid part of her problem may be you. You can make yourself less of a problem to Julie by taking your own advice and minding your own business.

Elated Over Release

Two of the four kidnaped students, Emily Bergman (L) of the Netherlands and Carrie Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif. are jubilant as they are met by friends at Dar Es Salaam Airport in Tanzania after being released by guerrillas based in Zaire. They had been held hostage in a jungle hideout for more than five weeks. (UPI)

Guerrillas Free Two More

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — The U.S. ambassador to Tanzania says he expects left-wing guerrillas in neighboring Zaire to free the last of four kidnaped foreigners within a week.

The release of Kenneth Steven Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., would end more than a month of behind-the-scenes negotiations with the guerrillas of Zaire's Popular Revolutionary party.

"I am confident he will be released within a week," Ambassador Beverly Carter said Sunday after the kidnapers freed Carrie Jane Hunter, 22, of Atherton, Calif., and Emilie Bergmann, 25, a Dutch woman, for an undisclosed ransom.

The guerrillas freed Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., six days after seizing the hostages May 19 in a raid against a Tanzanian wildlife reserve run by primatologist Jane Goodall.

Miss Smuts carried guerrilla ransom demands for $500,000, an assortment of weapons and the release of imprisoned commandos from Tanzanian jails.

Tanzania rejected the demands but friends and relatives of the captured students set out to raise money for a ransom.

Miss Hunter and Miss Bergman were set free from the guerrilla's stronghold in eastern Zaire Saturday morning, traveled by boat to Kigoma on the Tanzanian side of Lake Tanganyika and then flew to Dar Es Salaam.

"I'm in good health," they each told reporters Sunday. Both were suntanned and looked fit.

Norman Hunter, Carrie Jane's father, said that "negotiations leading up to the release of Emilie and Carrie have been in good faith as between honorable men."

Hunter and the girls declined to give details of the abduction or the negotiations for fear of prolonging Smith's captivity.

"We are not taking any risks at this time," Hunter said. "We are now most anxious and concerned that Stephen Smith will be released as soon as possible."

Hunter and Carter refused to discuss the ransom paid to the guerrillas, who are dedicated to the overthrow of President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire.

Rocket, Mortar, Machine Gun Fire Rip Beirut for Eighth Straight Day

BEIRUT (UPI) — Fierce rocket, mortar and machine gun fire terrorized Beirut for the eighth straight day today and Beirut Radio warned citizens that the entire city had become a fighting zone. Snipers began firing on ambulances and fire engines.

Police estimates put the casualty toll at more than 100 dead and 400 wounded as street battles between rival political factions entered their second week. The total count since fighting first broke out last April stood at more than 1,400 dead and injured.

The sound of rockets, mortars and machine guns ripped across the city during the night and again this morning and Beirut radio said all roads in the capital and its environs were "unsafe" and warned citizens to stay off them.

At least a dozen bomb blasts rocked the city during the early morning, damaging a school building, a church, scores of shops and cars and setting off dozens of fires.

Beirut radio said snipers were firing on ambulances and fire engines and that responding to emergency calls was becoming difficult.

Premier-designate Rashid Karami said Sunday he had reached agreement with Lebanon's warring parties on a new government but there was no letup in the fighting.

By daybreak today roads leading into the capital remained blocked as the fighting between rival political factions entered its second week.

The clashes spread to most parts of the city, and security authorities said the week of fighting cost the country more than 100 dead and about 400 wounded.

Karami said Sunday night he expected to name his new cabinet later today in an attempt to end three months of fighting between leftists and rightists, Christians and Moslems, Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese nationalists.

His announcement came at the end of the worst day of fighting in which heavy mortar, rocket and machinegun fire claimed at least 175 dead and wounded.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam arrived in Beirut shortly after midnight and began talks early today with President Suleiman Frangieh in an effort to mediate an end to the conflict.

"We could not sleep all night from the explosions and rockets," said a scared resident of Beirut's Ain Rummaneh suburb. "We are trapped at home... and we are short of food. It is another Stalingrad here... if this is not hell, I don't know what is."

In Ashrafieh, Furn El Chubbak and other east Beirut districts, residents spent the night in shelters with bullets zig-zagging over rooftops and rockets exploding in streets and apartments.

"We don't dare open windows, bullets are everywhere," an Ashrafieh resident said.

"All roads leading into the capital are not secure... keep tuned to Beirut radio for further announcement," an internal security forces announcement said at 8 a.m..

Colby Against Finance Disclosure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director William Colby is against even partial disclosure of the agency's finances.

Colby said that to make public just "a single figure" — the total amount spent by the CIA each year — would lead to demands for more information about the agency's secret activities.

"I think it is inevitable that if you expose a single figure, you will immediately get a debate as to what it includes, what it does not include, why did it go up, why did it go down," he said, "and shortly get into a description of the details of our activities."

He said "There are certain things ... in our clandestine activity that must be kept from public exposure and even the risk of public exposure."

Colby, appearing Sunday on a televised interview (NBC-TV: Meet the Press), was asked why it was necessary to maintain absolute secrecy over funds spent by the CIA.

CIA spending in recent years has been hidden in Defense Department appropriations. The Rockefeller Commission recommended Congress consider making at least part of the agency's budget public.

Colby also said allegations of CIA involvement in plots to assassinate foreign leaders "had best be settled by adopting a firm policy at this point not to use such activity and letting the past stay quiet."

He added: "Some of the facts are not well known or not well recorded, and some of the degree to which various people within and outside of the agency were a part of any such activities is not very clear."

Colby also said:

—He failed through a "misunderstanding" to inform the White House and Justice Department in 1973 when the CIA uncovered some of its own misdeeds. Colby said none of the evidence justified prosecution and he wanted "to let the misdeeds of the past sit quietly."

Now the Worst Crash in U.S. History

NEW YORK (UPI) — He was about 20 years old with dark brown hair, but no one even knew his name. He died in a coma Sunday, pushing the death toll in last week's Eastern Airlines crash to 112 — now the worst single-plane disaster in U.S. history.

"John Doe," the only unidentified survivor of Tuesday's Flight 66 from New Orleans, was the last hope for relatives and friends that their loved one might have survived the crash.

He died at 6 p.m. Sunday in Jamaica Hospital from respiratory failure.

The death toll exceeds the previous high of 111 recorded in the 1971 crash of an Alaska Airlines Boeing 727 into a mountainside near Juneau, Alaska.

A spokesman at Jamaica Hospital said tentative identification of the latest victim was made shortly after his death by a man from Canada, who said a scar on the dead man's foot was similar to one born by his first cousin.

"He couldn't tell by looking at the man's face because it was all black," the spokesman said.

The death left 12 crash survivors, all hospitalized — eight of them in critical condition,

The 111th victim, 7-year-old Tina Dispenza of Baton Rouge, La., died Saturday.

Federal authorities today planned to listen to tapes of the last minutes of the jetliner's descent in an effort to determine why the plane slammed to the ground yards short of Kennedy Airport during a late afternoon thunderstorm.

Members of the National Transportation Safety Board also planned to make public the tapes of conversations between the tower and pilot of the Boeing 727 and other pilots landing before it.

Included in the transmissions was a conversation with the pilot of a Flying Tiger DC8 cargo plane who reported severe turbulence on the same runway shortly before the crash and suggested the runway be closed.

Also included is a dialogue with an Eastern pilot who diverted his Tri-Star jet to Newark Airport because of bad weather.

Ed Nemes, the NTSB's investigator-in-charge, said air safety teams Sunday "were still examining the wreckage" of the Eastern jet which had been carted to Hangar 17.

The plane's engines and monitoring systems were being sent to Eastern facilities in Miami, Fla., for further examination, Nemes said.

Crime No Deterrent

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most New Yorkers think there's too much crime in New York City and that it's poorly run, but would recommend that visitors come anyway, according to a poll in today's New York Times.

The Times said 76 per cent of the 419 people it asked in a telephone poll in the city's five boroughs thought the city was poorly run, 79 per cent said there was too much crime in the city, but 70 per cent said police and fire protection in their own neighborhoods was adequate, and 70 per cent said New York is a more exciting city than other cities to live in.

But 73 per cent said if someone they knew was thinking of visiting New York City for a vacation or pleasure trip, they would recommend that the visitor come to the city.
